Roosevelt To Order 3 Regroupings Of Agencies

Plan Would Merge Welfare, Works and Lending Functions In Separate Units

By Robert C. Albright.

A reorganization plan grouping Federal welfare, public works and lending functions under three new agencies outside the regular departmental structure last night was being whipped into final form by the President for transmission to Congress today.

The thoroughgoing reshuffling, first exercise of the President's new reorganization powers, was said definitely to provide for separate public works and welfare set-ups and for consolidation of lending units under a new credit agency.

Another point in the program, dealing with departmental and inter-departmental changes, may be delayed or submitted in separate sections. Centralization of budget work and merger of Treasury law enforcement agencies were additional shifts being discussed.

Fourth May Be Included

One of these may be included as a fourth grouping in the President's reorganization plan submitted today.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Reorganization Committee, author of a comprehensive relief and works measure of his own, indicated he would defer to the President's wishes.

But transmission of the plan was expected to signalize a stampede of bureau heads to the Capitol, fighting for their official lives and the independence of their agencies, as well as pooled opposition by Republicans and Democrats who oppose merged continuance of WPA in the permanent Federal establishment.

Exact Form Unknown

Still unknown last night was whether today's reorganization orders will be submitted in a single plan or as separate proposals. The President is understood to favor the single-plan method, but has been advised an omnibus program may encounter difficulties. What will be done with WPA's "white collar" relief workers also was left for last-minute determination.

Merger proposals said to be definitely slated for submission today were:

A new credit agency, consolidating the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Federal Housing Administration, Home Owners Loan Corporation, Commodity Credit Corporation, Export-Import Bank and other lending groups under one head. RFC Chairman Jesse H. Jones may be placed at the head of this grouping.

A new public works agency, embracing PWA, WPA, the Bureau of Public Roads and construction activities of the Treasury's Procurement Division.

A new welfare unit, blanketing the Social Security Board, National Youth Administration, Civilian Conservation Corps, Public Health Service, the Office of Education and possibly the Children's Bureau.

Byrnes Bill Held Up

The plan paralleled in several details the bill for co-ordinating public works and relief activities in a permanent program framed by Senator Byrnes.

Other features were in direct conflict with the Byrnes measure, which had been slated for Senate consideration yesterday. Byrnes briefly took the floor to announce he temporarily would hold up his own plan pending submission of the

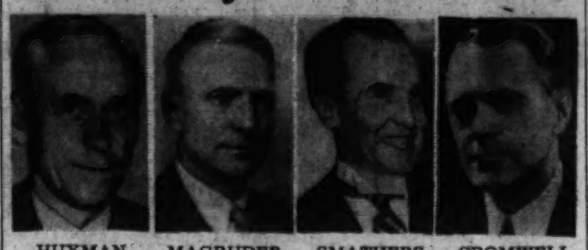
Doris Duke's Husband In Line for Senate



HUXMAN MAGRUDER SMATHERS CROMWELL

Cromwell Said to Be Moore's Choice for Smathers' Seat If Latter Is Named to Appeals Bench

James H. R. Cromwell, economist, athlete and husband of the world's richest heiress, Doris Duke, may come to the United States Senate to succeed Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey.

Cromwell, who several time has expounded his economic theories before Congressional committees, was said to be definitely in line for the Senate post when and if Smathers is appointed to the Third Circuit Court of Appeals.

Smathers is a candidate for the seat to be vacated by Judge J. Warren Davis, who has applied for retirement, and friends said his prospects of appointment are bright.

Still another "if" qualified the political hopes of young Cromwell. Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, who vainly sought appointment of Michael A. Musmanno to the third circuit bench, now is understood to have another judicial candidate in the field.

Francis Biddle, counsel for the TVA investigating committee, was appointed to the last vacancy in the circuit instead of Musmanno, and Guffey is reputed to have been assured his man would receive more consideration next time. Guffey now is understood to be backing Charles Alvin Jones, Pennsylvania's defeated Democratic gubernatorial nominee, to succeed Davis.

If Smathers wins the nomination instead, New Jersey party leaders are said to have informally agreed on Cromwell to fill the Senate shoes of the staunch New Jersey New Dealer, by appointment of Gov. A. Harry Moore.

Called at his home last night, Smathers said he had nothing to add to his statement last week that when and if the President offers him the judgeship, he would ask Mr. Roosevelt if he intends to run for a third term, because if so "I'd like to be in the fight with him."

Meanwhile the President sent to the Senate the nomination of Calvert Magruder, general counsel of

Fireboat Chief Dies in Beach Cottage Blaze

Capt. Jacob Stulz Trapped by Flames On Holiday Trip

Capt. Jacob Stulz, 67, veteran Washington fire captain and chief of the Firefighter, was burned to death yesterday in his blazing Beverly Beach, Md., cottage—on his day off.

He was trapped, apparently by falling timber when he rushed into the building for the keys to his automobile, parked close by, to save it from the flames, witnesses said.

Firemen from Galesville and West Annapolis fought vainly to control the fire which burned the two-room frame structure to the ground. The charred body of Stulz was identified by a neighbor, Miss Orville Tucker.

Stulz lived here at 407 Seward Square southeast. A veteran of 43 years service with the Washington Fire Department, he had been captain of the Firefighter since 1906.

The captain participated in many of Washington's greatest fires, including the $1,0000,000 blaze at the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co., in 1924; Galliher lumber yard, in Georgetown, 1925, and the Johnson-Witmsatt lumber yard, 1928.

Notified of the tragedy, Capt. Stulz' wife, Marie A. Stulz, and his daughter, Mrs. Richard Oden, left immediately for the scene.

Italy Bars U. S. Correspondent for 'Unfriendly' News

Rome, April 24 (AP).—Richard Mowrer, Rome correspondent of the Chicago Daily News for less than four months, was ordered today to leave Italy because of government disapproval of his dispatches.

An attache of the ministry of popular culture told him a week ago he would be required to leave the country within two weeks because the government considered the tone of his dispatches "unfriendly."

The United States Embassy made inquiries in Mowrer's behalf and succeeded in obtaining a one-week extension of the expulsion order.

The foreign office asserted that Mowrer's dispatches had contained false information and false interpretations, but no specific instance was cited. He is the second Chicago Daily News correspondent to be expelled from Italy within six months.

Mowrer is the eighteenth foreign correspondent to be expelled from Italy in the last two years.

Folk Festival Contestants March on D.C.

First to Arrive Was Harmonica Champion; Indian Tribe Follows

Lured to their Capital by the prospect of singing and dancing with hundreds of their countrymen, homespun Americans from farms, villages and cities in 25 States are on the way to Washington today to take part in the National Folk Festival. After three days of making friendships they will return home to share their experiences with families and neighbors.

The festival thus both symbolizes and stimulates the friendliness which underlies America's unity and democracy.

Although the festival does not open until Thursday afternoon, many of the participants from distant States have been en route for several days in order to reach Washington in time for the rehearsal scheduled for tomorrow night.

Harmonica Champion Is First

First to arrive in the city was Ira Russell, champion harmonica player from West Durham, N. C., who showeed up at festival headquarters yesterday. He will treat local audiences to the sound of old-time tunes played with the skill of an expert. It's Russell's first visit to Washington, so he allowed himself plenty of time to see the sights before the festival begins.

He was followed early this morning by a band of five Indians from the Zuni pueblo in New Mexico, seat of a rich culture and an orderly

Talk So Man Can Follow, Science Told

Nobel Prize Winner Says Technical Words Often Put Discoveries Into Evil Hands

A Nobel Prize winner last night told scientists to find their language.

Sir William Bragg, director of the British Royal Society, Pilgrim Trust lecturer at the National Academy of Science's annual meeting, declared that "the world has no clear knowledge of the position science has reached."

This is due, he explained, to the complicated technical language scientists use, and, he implied, to lack of care in the presentation of their researches.

Earlier in the day two other Nobel Prize men were in the group of scholars who read 27 technical papers to the Academy's opening session.

Stars' Speed Measured

The papers revealed a few of learning's newest and biggest strides were:

A new angle on an old-fashioned stereoptican in order to measure the speed of stars.

The discovery of a tiny "heart beat" in plant life.

Proper exposition of his discoveries is the obligation of every scientist, Sir William said. He noted that men "fighting each other in business or in war" are the first to seize on obscurely presented achievements of science which are passed over by the man who should be studying them—"the man of good will, the well-educated man who should be the leader. These latter, Sir William indicated, cannot take the time to understand the difficult technical language. The result is that all too often scientific discoveries are first used for evil purposes.

Cannot Stop Discoveries

"Most thinkers agree we are not responsible for the uses to which our discoveries have led. Discovery goes on and we should not, we cannot stop it if we would."

But it is not enough, he added, merely to discover new knowledge and indicate its possibilities of use. There is, besides, a responsibility on the "social plane."

"The spirit in which knowledge is sought and the manne. in which it is used is more important than the knowledge itself," he concluded.

3,000 Open Red Cross Parley Here

Delegates Hear Army Designate Society Chief of Disaster Relief

The Army yesterday recognized the American Red Cross as "the national agency having primary responsibility in the relief of disaster."

The relationship of the Nation's top disaster-relief organization and the War Department was given its first public definition in a speech by Brig. Gen. George P. Tyner, assistant Army chief of staff, before 3,000 delegates attending the Red Cross' annual national convention in Memorial Continental Hall.

As if in anticipation of new responsibilities, the Red Cross in an earlier session at Constitution Hall had decided to increase its membership by 1,000,000 to meet "all eventualities" in a war-threatened world. The convention also voted a membership drive slogan in keeping with world trends—"Keep the Red Cross Ready."

Outgrowth of Flood

"The War Department," Gen. Tyner declared, "will look to the Red Cross . . . to determine the actual specific needs in any locality and the Army will not undertake to respond to local appeals for issue of supplies until the Red Cross has examined these needs and is able to report that the needs are actual and are beyond the capacity of local resources or those of the Red Cross itself."

Pointing out that the new policy—a departure from Red Cross-Army relationships dating from World War times—was an outgrowth of the Army's experience in the disastrous Ohio-Mississippi flood of 1937, Gen. Tyner declared that this had shown demands for War Department aid "are often ill advised and should not have been made."

Aid Urged for Weaker

A Swiss surgeon, Dr. Georges Patry, representing the International Red Cross Committee at Geneva, followed Gen. Tyner to the platform with an outline of Red Cross responsibilities in event of war. On the problem of determining which side of a conflict should be aided, he enunciated the general policy that:

"In ordinary wars, that is to say, wars between one country and another, there is nothing to prevent a national society from giving assistance to one of the belligerent nations in preference to the other, or from favoring one of them by

2d French Ship Burned as Man Is Held in Paris Fire

Toulon, France (Tuesday), April 25 (AP).—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the 9,847-ton steamship Angers near the La Seyne shipyard here tonight. A military powder depot and gasoline stocks nearby escaped damage.

Investigation was ordered in possible sabotage. Only yesterday one man was arrested for incendiarism in the burning of the liner Paris at Le Havre last Tuesday.

The Angers, formerly called the Cap Acorna, was built in 1917 at Hamburg and was being broken up when the fire occurred. Loss was estimated at $5,200. It was owned by a French company.

Military Conscription Reported Approved By Britain's Cabinet

Lloyd George's Wartime Secretary Is England's Best-Known Bachelor

Philip Henry Kerr, the eleventh Marquess of Lothian, will succeed Sir Ronald Lindsay as British Ambassador in Washington "during the course of the summer," it was announced yesterday as King George VI approved the appointment.

The new envoy is a 57-year-old bachelor and wartime secretary to Premier David Lloyd George. He has been a member of the British government, off and on, since 1905. His last post was chairman of the Indian franchise committee in 1932.

Accused by anti-Fascists as being a member of the allegedly totalitarian "Cliveden" set, the wealthy landowner has bitterly denounced attempts to credit him with Fascist tendencies.

Only yesterday he spoke at a Citizens Service League luncheon in London in favor of compulsory British military conscription to meet the menace of Nazi-Fascist domination.

Mgr. Spellman Made New York Archbishop

Boston Prelate May Also Succeed Hayes In College of Cardinals

By the United Press.

Boston, April 24.—The Most Rev. Francis Joseph Spellman, Auxiliary Bishop of Boston, named today by Pope Pius XII to succeed the late Patrick Cardinal Hayes as Archbishop of New York, said tonight he would dedicate himself "in every way possible to the welfare of children, the hope of the future."

Friends of Mgr. Spellman expected the Pope to confer the cardinal's red hat upon him, perhaps at a consistory the Pope is believed preparing to call shortly to fill some of the 11 vacancies in the College of Cardinals.

In an interview at his residence at Sacred Heart rectory, Mgr. Spellman said he has not yet decided upon the date of his installation at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York City. He will not go to New York before his installation which, he said, will not be for at least two weeks.

Bishop Spellman was notified officially of his appointment in a telegram early today from Archbishop A. G. Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States.

In his first statement since his appointment, Bishop Spellman said:

"I realize the magnitude of the task to which his holiness, Pope Pius XII, has assigned me. I know that I have not the pre-eminent qualities of Cardinal Hayes, but I know, too, that I shall have the help of those whom Cardinal Hayes has

Busch Creates Totalitarian State of Bolivia

Dictator Says He Acted To Prevent Threatened Bankruptcy, Revolution

By the United Press.

La Paz, April 24.—President German Busch today abolished constitutional guarantees, dissolved the Congress and set up a totalitarian dictatorship in a drastic move to cope with internal economic and political conditions that threatened Bolivia with bankruptcy and revolution.

Busch, who became provisional president in July, 1937, after the overthrow of Col. David Toro and was elected constitutional head of the country last May, said his dictatorship was neither extreme leftist nor rightist, but "entirely Bolivian."

He explained his action, which was supported by the army, was necessary to save the country from a "formidable economic crisis" and a "fratricidal struggle" being plotted by political parties.

Cabinet Resigns

All cabinet ministers tendered their resignations, but Busch requested they be withheld temporarily.

Busch decreed establishment of a totalitarian state after an all-night session with his chief collaborator, Dionisio Foianini, minister of mines and petroleum. Financial circles had urged him to adopt dictatorial measures to cope with the economic situation which has plagued the country since the end of the Chaco war with Paraguay in June, 1935, but he said he was loath to do so under a democratic regime.

Alleging there had been an alarming increase in embezzlement of public funds, one of the first steps taken by Busch after establishment of his dictatorship was to decree the death penalty for all persons convicted of misapplication of public monies.

His totalitarian plan includes:

Dissolution of Congress and annulment of elections to fill vacancies in the Senate and Chamber of Deputies.

Provisional abolition of constitutional guarantees.

Financial and political dictatorship.

Fleet Is Passing Through Canal

Cristobal, Canal Zone, April 24 (INS).—The vanguard of the United States Navy's battle fleet arrived this evening for passage through the Panama Canal into the Pacific.

A 21-gun salute announced its arrival. The powerful fleet, ordered back to the Pacific by President Roosevelt, immediately began transit through the canal.

Decision Follows Warning to Hitler To Soften Answer to U.S., Reduce Army

Reichskanzler Warned

By International News Service.

London, (Tuesday), April 25.—In a drastic step to put up a red light of warning to Reichfuehrer Hitler and cement Europe's antiaggression front, the British cabinet agreed in principle to institute military conscription, it was learned early today.

This followed an eleventh hour attempt to dissuade Hitler from flatly rejecting President Roosevelt's peace proposals when he speaks to the Reichstag Friday.

Rushed back to his Berlin post, British Ambassador Sir Neville Henderson was scheduled this afternoon to deliver to the German government a sharply worded statement appealing for moderation, but warning that a belligerent pronouncement by Hitler Friday would impel Britain to go through with conscription measures immediately.

Conscription Plan Mapped

Prime Minister Chamberlain and his cabinet colleagues in an emergency meeting in Parliament Building last night not only agreed on the principle of compulsory military service—an unprecedented peace-time measure for England—but even mapped preparations to put conscription quickly into force.

Labor Minister Ernest Brown was charged with the task of compiling lists of hundreds of thousands of youths 18, 19 and 20 years old, the first three classes that would be summoned to the colors. Allowing for exemptions for work in munitions plants and naval shipyards, about 50 per cent of each class would be available for the army.

Announcement Likely Today

It was considered possible that an announcement concerning the measures for conscription—long urged upon England by France—might be made today in the House of Commons.

Today is "Budget Day" and Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon is expected to introduce record-breaking peace-time budget estimates totaling nearly $6,000,000,000 for the fiscal year that began April 1. Huge portions of the revenues will be earmarked for the preparedness push.

New "luxury" taxes—possibly on such items as cosmetics and tea as well as liquor—may be announced, it was reported.

New Crisis Threatened

Along with his plea for acceptance of the Roosevelt plan, Ambassador Henderson will try to obtain from the German Fuehrer concrete proof of his desire for peace, including partial demobilization of Germany's swollen army and with-

Suicide Corner No. 6

15th and H Streets N. E. a 5-Way Man Trap

Cars Turn Constantly Across Walker's Path; Only Thing Is Sprint

Confusing is a mild word for the five-way intersection of Fifteenth and H streets northeast.

Here, confronted with one of the worst problems in the city, authorities have sought to correct traffic evils with a complex signal light system plus an elaborate array of "do" and "don't" signs.

It's "no man's land" for the pedestrian. Lights at this hazardous crossing are solely for the guidance of motorists and the pedestrian is left to shift for himself.

Five busy streets—Fifteenth, Benning road, Maryland avenue, H street and Bladensburg road—intersect, cross or come to dead-ends. In addition to watching his own neck, the pedestrian must turn, twist and crane to keep abreast of such signs as "Thru Only," "Right Only," "No Turns," "Left Only" and "Do Not Enter."

Here's what happens to the pedestrian who wants to cross from the southeast corner of Fifteenth and Benning road, walking north:

There is no northeast corner, so he looks across at the northwest corner for guidance. There is no light for him there, but about 75 feet to the west is a signal facing him—the only one he has to go by. When it turns green, he starts—or tries to.

He quickly halts, however, for traffic is moving on an angle from Bladensburg road into Maryland avenue (right in his path); turning right from Fifteenth street into Benning road (also across his path);

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

There are now secret service men on guard with all branches of the Roosevelt family except the dowager Mrs. James Roosevelt, the President's mother. All the young people get plenty of crank mail, and it's the duty of the SS men to see they aren't molested just because Pa's in the White House. FDR's mother gets lots of mail, too; but it's all friendly mail in a vein of admiration; even the Roosevelt-haters think she's all right.

Cardenas . . . remote?

Best summary of the Nazi position is by John Gunther:

"Hitler doesn't want war; all he wants is the fruits of victory."

Among the Air Corps officers in Washington one of the believe-it-or-not tales is that Glenn Martin, who turns out those terrific Martin bombing planes for our Army and others, isn't allowed to fly in an airplane himself.

He carries $1,000,000 of life insurance, and the risk people just won't let him fly.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Marquis James, the Pulitzer prize biographer, who wrote "Andrew Jackson," one of President Roosevelt's favorite books, has been retained (not by the President, of course) to write a biography of Alfred duPont—one of the Roosevelts' ancestral in-laws, now, as well as the ancestor of some of F. D. R.'s severest critics . . . New candidates of the week: Justice Roberts, for the G. O. P.; Congressman Sam Rayburn, of Texas, as a Democratic compromise.

". . . no thrillers for Justices"

Some of the Capital's deep thinkers were meditating on the good fortune of Bill Douglas, youngest of the Supreme justices.

"The lucky stiff!" said one. "I'd rather trade places with him than any man in the world. On the court at 40, with $20,000 a year sure for the next 30 or 40 years, and a $20,000 pension when he wants to retire."

"Maybe it isn't as rosy a job as it seems from the outside," said a natural-born skeptic. "Justice Brandeis told me once that the job of a Supreme Court Justice isn't all it's cracked up to be. A Justice, he said, can't hide a novel behind his geography book; and oftentimes he has to listen to his colleagues' philosophical speculations when he'd much rather go home, or when he feels like dozing off."

One time Michelson, the Nobel prize winner in physics, went back to Annapolis to enjoy a reunion at the Naval Academy, which he had attended . . . He got off in a corner at the officers' club with some classmates.

"It's too bad you left the Navy," said one of them. "You might have been a rear admiral by now!" . . .

That gives you a rough idea of the pride of the service.

". . . Europe gets farther away"

Oddly enough, the more the foreign diplomats in the Capital try to interest Americans here in the situations in their native countries, by painting vivid and highly detailed pictures, the more remote, quaint and foreign do these distant scenes become, and the more fantastic does an American feel his own preoccupation with the foreign situation to be. Sometimes I have to pinch myself as I listen.

* * * *

To illustrate: When I listened to Col. Hurban, the Czech Minister, go into the bohemianism of Czecho-Slovakia, and become embroiled with the German diplomats about whether the University of Prague was founded by Germans or Bohemians, the more distant did the Czech scene float away from Pennsylvania Avenue.

* * * *

Also, when I hear Ambassador Cardenas, the new envoy from Spain, go into the Spanish labyrinth in overwhelming detail, or when I see Minister Konitza weeping for Zog's vanished kingdom, the more do I feel that this can't be real (as Senator Taft would say), and that we Americans are sitting up in the third gallery at a Graustark melodrama, so far away from the stage that we can't even reach it with a ripe tomato. Maybe the diplomats should play down the quaintness, the picturesqueness, the local color, or they'll make isolationists of us all.

'Your Majesty' Once Is Enough In U. S. Etiquette

By the Associated Press.

"Yes, your majesty," "no, your majesty," "quite right, your majesty," "I believe so, your majesty," "what does your majesty think?"

That's the way you talk to the King and Queen of England if you follow court etiquette, but State Department experts have decided to dispense with some of the formality during the visit of the royal couple in June.

The accepted way will be to put "your majesty" in the first sentence—and then be done with it.

Colored Group Hears Bilbo Colony Appeal

Senator Proposes Billion-Dollar African Plan Sponsored by U. S.

Three hundred colored persons from the Middle West sat in rapt silence in the Senate gallery for three and a half hours yesterday as Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, advocated a bill that would establish a huge colored settlement in West Africa.

The Bilbo measure, which he claims has the support of "75 per cent of the 12,000,000 Negroes in the United States," provides for acquisition of 400,000 square miles from the British and French governments, to be credited against their war debts.

U. S. Would Pay Billion

The American Government would pay the transportation costs of colored citizens willing to settle in the area and would subsidize them in establishing homes. A military government would give way in two years to a civil regime, whiche would eventually achieve independence or incorporation into the adjoining Republic of Liberia.

Asserting that there was "not one line of compulsion in the whole scheme," Bilbo's measure provides for an expenditure of up to $1,000,000,000 for the project.

Colored Groups Back Bill

The colored delegation from Chicago and Indiana arrived in Washington in a fleet of 21 trucks and cars. Members—men and women—said they belonged to an association called the "Peace Movement of Ethiopia," an advocate of resettlement of American colored persons in Africa.

The Rev. H. H. Embrae, director of the National Union of People of African Descent, said yesterday that Bilbo's "repatriation" bill "is a step forward in the realization of our central demand"—a United States of Africa, "under the control and destiny of black men." The director said that "1,000,000 Negroes stand ready to come to Washington to convince Congress that the bill should be acted upon favorably."

1,000 to Attend 3-Day Medical Conference Here

Over 1,000 physicians are to attend the opening of a three-day scientific assembly and post-graduate course today, sponsored by the District of Columbia Medical Society, on the general theme of "Gastroenterology."

Dr. James C. Sargent, clinical professor of urology at Marquette University School of Medicine, Milwaukee, will speak on "This, Our Oath," at a feature session in the Mayflower Hotel.

The opening session will hear current conditions in Europe discussed by Constantine Brown, news commentator. Dr. Martin E. Rehfuss, professor at Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, also will speak.

Other speakers will include Dr. Eloise B. Cram, National Institute of Health; Lieut. Comdr. Erik G. Hakansson, Naval Medical School, and numerous local physicians.

Court Grants Review Of Shipyard Labor Case

The Supreme Court yesterday granted a review to the National Labor Relations Board of a Fourth Circuit Court decision which refused to enforce an order of the board against the Newport News Shipbuilding Co.

The NLRB had required the company to disestablish an alleged company union. The Circuit Court held the board failed to support its order with evidence.

Dissension Over Chairmanship Occurs As Leon Henderson Is Named to SEC

G. O. P. Member Opposes Frank As Board Chief

Dissension arose in the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday over choice of a chairman as President Roosevelt appointed Leon Henderson, Administration economist, to the commission vacancy created when former Chairman William O. Douglas was named to the United State Supreme Court.

George C. Mathews, a Republican member of the commission, confirmed reports that he would not support Jerome N. Frank for the commission chairmanship.

Asked to explain his position regarding the chairmanship, Mathews replied:

"The one definite stand that I have taken is that I will not support Mr. Frank for the place. I have told him this and have explained to him what the reasons are."

Silent on Reasons

He would not reveal his reasons, however. There was some indication that he had been asked by the White House to support Frank and had refused.

The commission elects its own chairman. A report was circulated that Judge Robert E. Healy, the other Republican member of the commission, had sided with Mathews in opposing Frank for the chairmanship. Healy refused to comment on this report, saying he would make his position known when the question of the chairmanship arose in commission meeting.

"I am not going to comment in advance," he declared.

Henderson Qualified, Frank Says

Frank refused to make any statement. "All I have to say," he remarked, "is that I believe the appointment of Mr. Henderson to a place on the commission is commendable. He is thoroughly qualified for the place."

The Administration's plan, it is reliably reported, is to have Frank named chairman, at least temporarily. Frank has intended to resign and resume the practice of law. Recent reports, however, have been that he would consent to remain and serve as chairman for several months.

Obviously, no action will be taken regarding the chairmanship until Henderson's nomination is voted on by the Senate. Democratic leaders predicted confirmation, although there were rumblings of opposition from conservative Senators.

Forecast Recession

Henderson, whose stock rose sharply in Administration circles when he forecast the recession, has been identified with the New Deal left-wingers, including Thomas G. Corcoran and Benjamin V. Cohen. Corcoran tried to have President Robert M. Hutchins, of the University of Chicago appointed to the Douglas vacancy, but Hutchins refused to accept.

In practice, the commission elects as chairman the commissioner designated by the White House. If both Mathews and Healy oppose Frank, the latter will be placed in the position of having to vote for himself to gain a majority. Henderson and former Representative Edward C. Eicher, the other Democratic members, presumably would support him.

Eicher said he was "greatly gratified" over Henderson's appointment.

LEON HENDERSON

Douglas' unexpired term, for which Henderson has been appointed, ends June 5, but President Roosevelt is expected to name him for a full five-year term at that time.

Appointment Not Popular

His appointment is not popular in Wall Street—although the same was true of the appointment of Douglas. Paul Shields, of Shields & Co., chairman of the public relations committee of the New York Stock Exchange, in a recent conference with President Roosevelt was said to be anxious to have one of the members of the commission staff promoted to the vacancy. Chester T. Lane, commission general counsel, and Ganson Purcell, director of the trading and exchange division, were prominently mentioned for the place.

Henderson, who is 44, was appointed from New Jersey. It was his outspoken criticism of the NRA that brought him to Washington. Gen. Hugh Johnson invited him to come down to see if he could do better.

He became a research director, and later an economist for the WPA.

In his writings and speeches he has laid much stress on consumer problems. He has been a leading advocate of the spending-lending policy.

Philippine Attorney Admitted to High Court

Amador Buenaseda, Philippine attorney, was honored by friends at a luncheon yesterday on his admission to practice before the United States Supreme Court.

Present in the Chinese Lantern were:

Francisco Varona, Dr. Jose Reyes, Marcelino Bautista, Dr. Mauro Baradi, Juan A. Barretto, Juan Garchitorina, Sebastian Uzarte, Manuel Adeva, C. T. Elbo, Arturo Tomelden, Dr. V. Diamonon, Dr. D. M. Yap, Dean Jose Aruezo, Dr. E. Pombuena, Miss Helen Benitez, Mrs. Florentino Calabia and Max Villareal.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, asked President Roosevelt today to support a project for a bridge across or a tunnel under Baltimore Harbor, to cost between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000.

RADCLIFFE

Radcliffe said such a bridge or tunnel would be of great value for national defense purposes. He said he understood the Army engineers had approved such a project, but another survey would be necessary before construction could be started.

The nominations of William E. Lee, of Idaho, and J. Haden Alldredge, of Alabama, to be members of the Interstate Commerce Commission, were confirmed by the Senate yesterday.

To frame a definite policy for interchange of cultural influences between the United States and nations of Latin America, Secretary of State Hull asked Congress, in a letter to Speaker Bankhead, to authorize appointment of an advisory committee for the new division of cultural relations.

The division is headed by Dr. Ben M. Cherrington.

James M. Slattery, of Illinois, took the oath of office as a Democratic Senator, succeeding the late J. Hamilton Lewis. He was escorted to Vice President Garner's rostrum by his colleague, Senator Lucas (Democrat), Illinois.

Four Republican Senators urged that authority to negotiate trade agreements or treaties affecting commerce be transferred from the State Department to the Tariff Commission.

Aimed directly at modifying the Administration's reciprolcal trade policy, the proposal was introduced jointly by Senators Bridges (New Hampshire), Lodge (Massachusetts), Gurney (South Dakota) and Wiley (Wisconsin).

It would provide also that the Senate must ratify any trade agreement.

Representative Cox (Democrat), Georgia, charged in the House that Communists held key positions in many Government departments.

The Georgian described the situation as "disturbing" and mentioned as some branches of the Government where Communists or persons of Communist leanings hold key positions, the Labor Department, the Labor Relations Board and the wage-hour administration.

AFL Asks Poll Of Miners on CIO Demands

Bituminous Commission Weighs Price Fixing to Block Strike Increase

By the United Press.

American Federation of Labor President William Green last night stepped into the dispute over a new soft coal contract and suggested a poll of the Nation's 450,00 soft coal miners to see whether they want closed shop representation by John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers' Union.

Green addressed an open letter to Special Government Mediator John R. Steelman, who delayed until this morning his meeting with appalachian bituminous producers and U. M. W. officials whose deadlock on contract terms has caused 330,000 miners to be idle since April 1.

Lewis has instructed another 130,000 workers to close down the rest of the soft coal mines by May 4, unless he and the operators come to terms.

Price-Fixing Weighed

Steelman delayed his departure for New York until last night while he conferred with the National Bituminous Coal Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission and other Government agencies concerning the impending serious coal shortage.

Coal Commission Chairman Percy Tetlow disclosed simultaneously that his group was considering invoking its powers to fix maximum coal prices to keep the cost of fuel from sky-rocketing if the mine shutdown continues for a long period.

The A. F. of L.'s Progressive Mine Workers of America is an offshoot of Lewis' union and the closed shop demand is said to be intended to check its organizing campaign among Lewis' followers.

Discussing Lewis demand for a closed shop or elimination of the penalty clause as the price of a new contract, Green said that "thinking people can reasonably ask why this demand after an experience in collective bargaining covering a period of more than 30 years?"

"The question which one instinctively asks when considering this phase of the matter is why not allow the miners to determine for themselves the character and nature of their own collective barbaining agency?" Green continued.

"That is the principle of self-determination which is written into the labor relations act. The miners . . . can take such action under the labor relations act in a clearly democratic fashion by a majority vote.

"Elimination of the penalty clause, . . . and the agreement of a universal closed shop, is designed to prevent the application of this policy of democratic procedure. . . .

"The Progressive Mine Workers of America will protect their existing contracts with coal operators and will maintain their rights to represent all employes of an employer when designated by a majority to act as exclusive bargaining representatives."

Hopkins Asks Jail Term For Reckless Boatmen

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins asked Congress yesterday to make reckless operation of motor boats on navigable waters punishable by a jail sentence of up to one year, or a fine of up to $2,000.

He also proposed requirements that engines and fuel tanks of certain types of motor boats be ventilated to prevent fires from backfiring motors.

A complete directory of Washington churches, 672 of them, religious organizations and clergy was released yesterday by the Church Archives Inventory of the Federal Historical Records Survey, a WPA project.

Trade Practice Bill Scheduled for Hearing Thursday

Public hearings were scheduled for 10 a. m. Thursday on the District fair trade practices bill after it was withdrawn from the House calendar for the second time because of protests from consumer groups. It was withdrawn first after Federal Trade Commission opposition.

At the same time the Judiciary sub-committee of the House District Committee will hear testimony on the Randolph bill to amend the District unemployment compensation act.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, its sponsor, yesterday insisted on withdrawal of the price-fixing measure, saying he had promised a number of persons a hearing.

AP Considers Lifting Ban On Radio News

Murphy, as Guest Speaker, Asks Aid To Keep Courts Clean

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 24.—A resolution urging the Associated Press board of directors to consider the question of allowing AP news to be broadcast on commercially sponsored radio programs was adopted today by the association's members in their annual meeting.

It followed authorization of an amendment to the AP's certificate of incorporation, stating that henceforth one of its objects was to be the supplying of news not only to member newspapers but to "others entitled to the use thereof."

Two-third Vote Necessary

In a move begun by Joseph E. Ridder of the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press, the meeting went on record by vote of 139 to 36 as proposing a grant of discretionary power to the board to remit operating assessments against members in periods of emergency shutdowns, including strikes, for the period of nonoperation.

For such a policy to become operative, however, it would be necessary first for the board of initiate it by two-thirds vote, and second for it to be accepted in a vote of the membership. The board already had declined to grant Ridder's request for such a remission.

Among those who spoke out against the proposed grant of such authority to the board was Frank B. Noyes, of the Washington Star, veteran former A. P. president.

Murphy Is Guest Speaker

Attorney General Frank Murphy was the meeting's guest speaker at luncheon. Introduced by Robert McLean, of the Philadelphia Bulletin, A. P. president, as President Roosevelt's "right arm of justice," Murphy appealed for public support to protect the courts "from every influence that is degrading and unclean."

It was a "bitter but undeniable fact," he said, that the courts had been lowered in public esteem.

The six A. P. directors whose terms expire this month were reelected: W. H. Cowles, of the Spokane (Wash.) Spokesman-Review; George B. Longan, of the Kansas City Star; Robert R. McCormick, of the Chicago Tribune; L. K. Nicholson, of the New Orleans Times-Picayune; E. Lansing Ray, of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, and Stuart H. Perry, of the Adrian (Mich.) Telegram.

Nominating Committee Named.

The following were elected to the nominating committee: J. S. Parks, of the Fort Smith (Ark.) Times-Record, chairman; Charles P. Manship, of the Baton Rouge (La.) State-Times; W. W. Knorpp, of the Phoenix (Ariz.) Gazette; Frank S. Baker, of the Tacoma (Wash.) Ledger; Hugh Powell, of the Coffeyville (Kans.) Journal; Frank Throop, of the Lincoln (Nebr.) Star; E. D. Corson, of the Lockport (N. Y.) Union Sun and Journal; Henry Walser, of the Hazleton (Pa.) Standard Sentinel.

Elected to the auditing committee:

Frank G. Huntress, jr., of the San Antonio (Tex.) News; C. F. Waite, of the San Pedro (Calif.) News Pilot; Joel H. Bixby, of the Muskogee (Okla.) Times Democrat; E. R. Stevenson, chairman, of the Waterbury (Conn.) American.

Eleanor Powell Named Judge In 'Beauty With Brains' Contest

ELEANOR POWELL.

Tap-Dancing Star Will Serve With Tydings and Randolph To Select Finalists for Post Cup

Eleanor Powell, tap-dancing screen star, will be the third judge on the panel which will select the finalists in the "Beauty With Brains" contest for Government girls.

Miss Powell, who will be available to serve as judge because she will be making personal appearances at Loew's Capitol Theater during the week the contest is to be judged, is particularly suited to serve as a judge of Washington beauties because of her popularity among Washingtonians. Miss Powell participated in the last two President's Birthday Ball celebrations here, and is the only screen star ever to have appeared twice at these balls.

The other two judges of the contest are Senator Tydings, of Maryland, and Representative Randolph, of West Virginia. The preliminary judging will be done from the photographs entered in the contest. Those who pass this test will appear before the judges on the stage of Loew's Capitol, and the six most Umbrella Court quiz, which will determine which is the brainiest.

First prize is an all-expense trip to the World's Fair in New York, as guest of the A. F. G. E., and a loving cup donated by The Post. The A. F. G. E. guarantees the winner the time of her life! Preparations include a cocktail party, reception, and dinner the first day and a tour of the Fair on Government Employes Day.

All you need to do to enter the contest is to select the portrait or snapshot that shows you at your loveliest, write your name, address and Government Bureau on the back, and send it to the Contest Editor of The Washington Post. The trip is worth winning—but you can't win unless you enter, so send in your picture today.

Navy Seeks Rule To Take Sailor's Pants Off Girl

New York, April 24 (U.P.).—Naval authorities thumbed their regulations tonight for a passage telling them how to get a pair of regulation U. S. Navy pants off a joke-loving young woman and back on the person of a musician, first class, where they belong.

Meanwhile, the musician was in the brig.

Police picked up 20-year-old Barbara Wendell shortly after the sailor had returned at dawn to the U. S. S. New York, minus his pants, hat and shore pass.

Barbara had all three of the missing articles. She told Magistrate Jeanette Brill she took them after the sailor went to sleep at a party.

Landon Holds Church Unity Step to Peace

Kansan Is Delegate to Conference to Merge 3 Methodist Groups

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, April 24.—Alf M. Landon tonight viewed the unification conference of the three Methodist Churches as a step which might "encourage other movements of this kind" to an eventual aim of "invoking divine aid" for world peace.

The 1936 Republican Presidential nominee is a delegate to the uniting sessions opening Wednesday to bring 8,000 Methodists into one church organization. Landon spoke tonight at the centennial celebration of the founding of the Boston University School of Theology.

He said, "This conference has a broader meaning than its value merely to the Methodist Church. The mutual good will and understanding growing out of this conference will have a profound effect on our national life. We seek, not the welfare of Methodism alone, but the welfare of all churches and all peoples, and by our success here let us hope to encourage other movements of this kind.

"It almost seems as if we were watching monstrous and horrible phantoms, mad with desire for power, filling the universe with hate and fear while they poise for the next threatening blow. The world, sinking under this load of hate—weary and in despair—is turning, as always, to the devoted hands of its churches.

"Their ways are different, but their ideals are alike. From this base, fixed by all the experiences of mankind, must come those Christian principles which will reclaim the world for democracy and humanity. . . .

"It is not a case of invoking divine aid to help any group of individuals win the victory. It is a case of humbly invoking divine aid to achieve the heart's desire of all the common peoples of the world. That desire is peace."

Meanwhile, a movement for full clergy rights for women was in evidence among early arrivals for the unity meeting, although only 67 of the 900 official delegates of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church South and the Methodist Protestant Church are women.

The women also will ask for an autonomous women's board within the new church to promote and administer both foreign and domestic missionary work.

Automobile Caravan Arrives

A three-automobile caravan of Lithuanian dancers, led by Vytautas Beliajus, of the Chicago Park District, arrived late last night from Illinois after two long days on the road. In addition to their appearance at the National Folk Festival, they will perform Thursday evening at the King-Smith Playhouse under the auspices of the Baltic-American Society of Washington.

Choice seats for the National Folk Festival at Constitution Hall, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, are disappearing fast. Before they all are gone buy your tickets at the festival ticket office, Washington Post Building, 1337 E street northwest. Prices for the three matinees range from 50 cents to $1; for the evenings shows, from 50 cents to $2. A different program will be presented at each performance.

Mrs. Randle Convicted on Fraud Charge

'Body Builder' Found Guilty on Accusation Of False Pretenses

Mrs. Rosalyn Randle, self-styled "Masterful Mind and Body Builder," last night was found guilty of obtaining $500 under false pretenses as a fee for treatment of Rufus Reed, 19-year-old University of Pennsylvania student, whom she claimed suffered from an urge to kill himself.

An all-male jury deliberated four hours before bringing in the verdict. Justice Adkins set bond at $1,000 for Mrs. Randle's appearance in District Court on charges of using the mails to defraud. She has not yet served a 90-day sentence for practicing medicine in Massachusetts without a license.

Attired in black for the first time since her trial began, Mrs. Randle received the verdict without visible emotion.

In voluble testimony last week Mrs. Randle described dozens of pamphlets and books she has written, lectures in Central America and ten years' successful operation of health resorts. The fee she received from Mrs. Catherine Reed for "services" to her son was "only about half the usual charge in such cases, she told the court.

Mrs. Randle was decribed as a "supreme faker" by Assistant District Attorney A. B. Caldwell in his closing argument before the jury.

Defense Attorney Robert H. McNeill attacked Mrs. Reed as a "thoroughly embittered" woman, who instigated the present suit out of a desire for "revenge," having already been awarded in Municipal Court $400 of the $500 fee originally paid Mrs. Randle.

Boy's Kidnaping Reduced to Ride On Train to D. C.

A 16-year-old schoolboy's tale of being kidnaped in New York yesterday morning "by four men who wanted $5,000 ransom" was broken down last night by District police.

The youth, Joseph Tenopry, of Brooklyn, son of a New York physician, said he was seized on the way to school, forced into a sedan, and kept blindfolded for nine hours in the auto.

Without explanation, the youth said, the kidnapers pushed him out of the auto near First Precinct police station here, where the youth announced the kidnaping. He was unable to explain, however, a Union Station locker key in his pocket. He finally admitted taking a train to the Capital on impulse.

Jimmy LaFontaine Will Reopen His Casino Next Week

With the threat of a grand jury investigation past and the racing season at Bowie over, "Jimmy" LaFontaine will reopen his casino on Bladensburg road just beyond the District line.

An attendant last night notified prospective patrons that business would be resumed "sometime next week."

For years it has been "Jimmy's" custom to close during the semiannual sessions of the grand jury. He also closes during the county racing season in order not to compete against the tracks.

"Jimmy's Place" has been closed since early last month.

Hutchinsons Leave Here on Flight to Ottawa

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dr. Walter Bauer directs the Department of Agriculture Orchestra and Symphonic Chorus Monday evening in the Department Auditorium. Program: Overture to "Der Freischeutz" (Weber), Sinfonietta (Chadwick), Suite, "In Switzerland" (Charles), "Landsighting" (Grieg), Miniature Suite for Strings (Hoy); "Now Cometh May" from "Rinaldo" (Handel), "An der schoenen, Blauen Donau" (Strauss).

At is concert last evening under the direction of Dr. Walter Bauer, the Department of Agriculture Orchestra featured on the program compositions by two of its members: Franklin B. Charles and Rolland Hoy. The former, who is professor of orchestration at the Sisters' College of Catholic University, was represented by a suite, "In Switzerland," and the latter, who plays in the violin section, by a miniature suite for strings.

In the matter of age, Mr. Charles has the priority for his suite was written 30 years ago after a vacation among the Alps. Frankly descriptive and romantic, the music is attractive and well scored. There is a prelude evocative of the grandeur of the mountains, a landscape section entitled "On the Rigi," and a "Villanelle" based upon the rhythm of a country dance.

Mr. Hoy is a young composer whose taste does not run to the dissonant side, for his three-movement suite for strings is melodically lyric in tendency and conservative in harmony. He has clear ideas in thematic invention, and he handles these ideas with imagination. The scoring shows a sound knowledge of counterpoint and a deft utilization of the colors obtainable from the string choirs.

The program opened with Weber's overture to "Der Freischutz," which was followed by George Whitefield Chadwick's charming Sinfonietta which has not been heard here for some time. The verve of the music spring from a genial nature with a keen sense of humor which has full play in the Canzonetta and the Scherzino.

The men's section of the Symphonic Chorus contributed Grieg's "Landsighting" and the women's section was heard in "Now Cometh May" from Handel's opera "Rinald May' from Handel's opera "Rinaldo." The two sections joined forces in the final number, the original choral version of the famous Strauss waltz, "An der shoenem, blauen Donau," which was first given to the world as the setting of a poem by Karl Beck. The program will be repeated tonight.

C.A.R. Revolts At Adult Domination

Defeats Resolution To Approve Emblem Submitted for Society

Friction over adult domination of the Children of the American Revolution flared yesterday during closing debate on a resolution to provide an emblem for the society.

Representatives of outlying chapters also protested alleged efforts by Virginia delegates to guide decisions of the society during the three-day convention ended yesterday.

The resolution to approve the only emblem submitted was defeated during the controversy and another proposal ordering submission of several designs to the various chapters by January 1 was approved by the congress. In the course of discussion, however, nearly every delegate rose to protest efforts of adult members to rule the organization.

Mrs. Charles S. Groves, chairman of the credentials committee, responded that adults were not trying to keep the convention members from having what they wanted. She pointed out also that there were only 56 more junior delegates at the convention than adults.

Delegates went on record in favor of celebration of flag week and indorsed a plan for Federal acquisition of the Decatur House, Jackson place and H street northwest, as a national museum.

They also voted unanimously for appointment of junior officers of the society and approved a request that the Chemawa Indian School in Oregon be added to the society's list of approved Indian schools.

After installation of new national officers, the delegates made their annual pilgrimage to Mount Vernon where wreaths were laid on the tombs of George and Martha Washington.

Powell School Pupils Visit District Building

Thirty-eight students of Powell Junior High School yesterday visited the District Building for first-hand information on how a municiple government operates.

They heard from Dr. Melvin P. Isaminger, of the activities of the health department; Geoffrey Thornett, secretary of the board of commissioners, of the administration of the local government and from A. W. Crosley about the District PWA program.

Columbia Heights Body To Hear Chief Porter

Chief Stephen S. Porter, of the Washington Fire Department, will speak at the meeting of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, 1410 Columbia road northwest, at 8 p. m. tonight.

Polls open at 7 p. m. for election of officers.

giving help on a larger scale than the other."

"It is to be hoped, however," he declared, "that the greater assistance will be given the one which, as it is the weaker, has the greater need."

Representatives of more than a score of foreign diplomatic missions were in the galleries of Constitution Hall to hear the convention opening address of Red Cross Chairman Norman Davis, formerly President Roosevelt's ambassador to all nations, and to witness a parade of 300 flag-bearing nurses.

To diplomats and delegates—among the latter were nearly 1,000 Junior Red Cross members from 30 States—Davis said:

"Today there are disturbing indications of retrogression. We see man's disruptive forces at work. Treaties, laws and covenants of peace have been brushed aside leaving nothing but naked force to take their place. The world in which we live is in a state of doubt and anxiety."

The Red Cross, Davis said, is a "bond between men and nations more lasting than the spoils of victory and more satisfying than the pursuits of war."

A 1,000,000 increase in membership was sugggested by Stone as a token of the organization's resolve to "be prepared for eventualities." As soon as he had finished speaking, Charles H. Kellstadt, chairman of the Cleveland chapter, leaped to his feet with a resolution to that effect. The rules were suspended and it was adopted.

High points of other morning session addresses were:

The Rev. Elmore McKee, rector of St. George's Church, New York—"There is something in the atmosphere of today that makes man's spirits droop. Man is prone to hate when fears are aroused as they are today: Hate will destroy the haters. The Red Cross faces a direct responsibility for combating these attitudes of fear and distrust. Ministering to human needs is the retort to chaos."

Ernest J. Swift, Red Cross vice chairman in charge of insular and foreign operations—"When we celebrate the anniversary of the Red Cross we are not celebrating the formation of a mere society . . . but rather the day when human compassion for the first time took the form of a universal moral code—a code of honor with strict rules."

Eighteen-year-old Charles W. Daly, jr., Hartford, Conn., speaking for the Junior Red Cross—"Today in America we need citizens who will take an active interest in government."

Eliot Wadsworth, of Boston, acting Red Cross chairman in the early World War period, who traced the organization's history, and James K. McClintock, vice chairman in charge of financial affairs, who declared all Americans should have a vital share in Red Cross work, were the other afternoon speakers.

Junior delegates met in the afternoon at the new Interior auditorium to select George Fishbaugh, Omaha, Nebr., chairman; Ruth Berry, Cleveland, vice chairman, and Patricia Stodghill, Atlanta, secretary.

ABC Rejects Two Beer Applications

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday denied two applications for licenses to permit on sale of beer. Morris Cohen, 1606 Fourteenth street northwest, was told his neighborhood was "sufficiently supplied." Morris Ostrow, 106 Thrirteenth street southeast, was informed his location was "inappropriate."

Chamber Gives 1939 Banquet In Arlington

180 Members, Wives Gather at Washington Golf and Country Club

Arlington County Bureau of The Post, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0569.

More than 180 members and their wives gathered at the Washington Golf and Country Club last night for the annual banquet of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce.

The exercises opened with the invocation by the Rev. Edwin Lee, pastor of St. Thomas More Catholic Church, and was followed by an address of welcome by President Erle R. Kirby.

Walter U. Varney, toastmaster, outlined progress of the county and pointed out that in 1932, 374 permits were issued for new construction representing an outlay of $1,065,118, and last year there were 1,807 permits for new construction representing an expenditure of $10,077,882. The records thus gar this year, he said, indicated that new construction will exceed that of last year.

He also said the tax rate in Arlington County is lower than that of the District of Columbia and Montgomery County, Md.

Alexander F. Jones, managing editor of The Washington Post, guest speaker, praised the Chamber of Commerce for the part it has taken in the great growth of the county in the last few years. One of the greatest things the Chamber of Commerce or any civic organization could do, he said, would be to develop one outstanding project and that as a result the county would become known throughout the entire country.

Among the guests were State Senator John W. Rust, County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan, E. R. Breauth, president of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce; Dr. Victor Meyers, president of the Arlington County Civic Federation, and F. Freeland Chew, chairman of the county board.

The program included several songs by E. J. E. Veith Veitch, accompanied by T. E. Tusker.

Hugh Johnson Asks Repeal of Neutrality Act

Pittman Plan His 2d Choice, General Says, Denouncing Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

Denouncing the Roosevelt foreign policy as a "magnificent gamble on a hair-line chance" of averting war, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson urged the repeal of the neutrality act yesterday and the substitution of a simple statute warning Americans that if they enter war zones they do so at their own risk.

As a second choice, he told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he would prefer the Pittman amendments, placing all trade with belligerent nations on a "cash and carry" basis. That this might work out to the advantage of Great Britain and Japan, he said, was "no fault or act of ours."

It is true, he said, that "if we make economic war" we may prevent actual war, but such a result is hardly certain.

Says Plan Failed Before

"The threat of our tremendous economic strength in 1917 didn't stop Germany," he said, "we had to get into military war. There is no assurance that this strategy will stop war now. It is a thin and uncertain chance. But if it didn't stop war, one thing is certain: we would have bought a war. Nobody can deny that. It is a gamble—a magnificent gamble on a hair-line chance.

"Well, this is a gambling Government. It has shot craps with destiny with three to five billions a year—at least five times—on a bet that it could restore our proper prosperity. It has lost on every single pass.

Fears Gigantic Costs

"But all the 20 or so billions that have been gambled and lost through these years would be nothing compared to this gamble. It was 40 billions gross in the last war. It might be 60 or a 100 billion this time. It might be that, plus mountainous human losses of life and limb and happiness so great that nobody can measure them—all that has been gained here of wealth and welfare by 150 years of frugality and sacrifice.

"It is too much to risk. I think that Congress has no right so far to surrender its duty to the people as to make it possible to take so great a hazard on the judgment of any single individual, no matter how good and great."

Accuses Kennedy, Bullitt

In passing, Johnson got in a dig at Joseph P. Kennedy and William C. Bullitt, American Ambassadors to Great Britain and France. Touching on diplomatic events which preceded American entry into the World War, he complained that Walter Hines Page, American envoy to London at the time, really acted like a "British Ambassador to Washington."

"It would be a good idea," Johnson added, "to inquire whether we haven't got another one of those things at the Court of St. James right now. The dowagers and the duchesses—not to mention the debs—are a potent pill. And while we are about it we might take a careful look at our other Ambassador in Paris."

House Hears Repeal Plea

With Johnson's testimony, the committee approached the end of a series of hearings on proposed changes in the neutrality act. Meanwhile the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, pursuing the same study, heard two witnesses, James M. Miller, of Washington, and Quincy Howe, New York writer, urge repeal of the neutrality law, the one because he thought it dangerous" and the other to give the Administration more freedom of action on matters of foreign policy.

A third witness, Mrs. George A. Fitch, the wife of a Y. M. C. A. secretary in China, stimulated a burst of applause among the spectators—the first the hearings have heard—with a recommendation that the United States apply economic sanctions to Japan.

"Nothing from Japan; nothing to Japan, would end the war in China very quickly," she said.

On the Senate floor, Senator Johnson (Democrat), Colorado, said that all nations "should be warned now that if they go to war we shall have no part of it." He said he would actively oppose "the adoption of a policy of sanctions, encirclements, quarantines, world policing or taking steps 'short of war,'" He added: "In my thinking there are no steps short of war. It must be either war or honest neutrality."

The House committee, which has listened for two weks to the neutrality views of doctors, lawyers, soldiers and fellow legislators, will seek the advice soon of Secretary Hull on diplomatic aspects of proposed neutrality laws; Secretary Hopkins, on effects on trade, and Secretaries Woodring and Swanson on military and naval affairs.

The Secretary of State's testimony may provide Congress with the first detailed information on Administration views on neutrality law changes, heretofore outlined only broadly by President Roosevelt.

guided, and they will, I am sure, help to guide me.

"I am heartened to realize," he said, "that I shall have the strong, practical and able co-operation of my companion of seminary days and my friend down through the years, Bishop (Stephen Patrick J.) Donahue.

"I shall rely greatly on the enlightened counsel of the venerable and beloved vicar-general, Mgr. Lavelle. I am confident that I shall have loyal assistance of the experienced diocesan officials and the zealous clergy and relious. I know that the ever faithful and devoted Catholic laity will co-operate with me in doing God's work for God's greater honor and glory.

"I shall dedicate myself in every way possible to the welfare of children, the hope of the future. I shall welcome the participation of all in doing the good things for God, for country, for the poor, the sick, the suffering and the underprivileged.

"For my part," he cantinued, "I shall give my all and do my best. I shall pray and work—pray as if everything depended on God; work as if everything depended on me. My completely absorbing interest will be the salvation of souls—including all, and the welfare of my fellow man—excluding none."

Earlier, William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, in publicly congratulatnig Bishop Spellman, said:

"I can say with certainty that in due time the priests and the good people of New York will come gladly to the aid of their archbishop in the glorious work which faces the church in this country by maintaining the best standards of Christian faith, of Catholic action and of true patriotism."

When introduced to newsmen by Cardinal O'Connell, spellman, clasping a red-bound prayer book, stood with bowed head. Expressing his happiness "that hte Holy Father has thought me worthy of such a position," he added:

"I shall do my best to justify his confidence in me."

Archbishop's Visit Recalled

Washington Catholics yesterday recalled Archbishop Spellman's visit here in October, 1936, when Cardinal Pacelli, now Pope Pius XII, made Washington one of the principal points of call on his American tour.

The newly-appointed Archbishop of New York attended Cardinal Pacelli at a reception at the National Press Club and on his trip to Mount Vernon, Catholic University, Georgetown University and other places visited in Washington.

It was recalled that when Archbishop Spellman left Rome, after many years there, a part of the journey back to America was made in the company of Cardinal Pacelli. The outstanding personality of the Cardinal at the time of his visit here overshadowed members of his entourage and but little was noted at the time of the close association between the cardinal and the American churchman.

Britain Courts Rumania With Trade Mission

Negotiations Aimed At Weakening Nazi Hold on Carol's State

By the Associated Press.

Bucharest, April 24.—Great Britain today opened trade negotiations with Rumania which informed quarters said marked the beginning of a direct and specific campaign to draw Rumania away from the economic and political influence of Germany.

The negotiations were being conducted by a commission of British financial and industrial experts who started to work immediately after their arrival here at noon. The commission is led by Sir Frederick Leith-Ross.

Credit Offer Forecast

The commission was credited here with having political as well as economic motives.

Outwardly the negotiations were regarded as a vigorous countermove to German trade inroads made in the recent German-Rumanian trade pact signed March 23. Sir Frederick is understood to have been authorized to grant extensive financial credits.

The commission is expected also to conduct a variety of negotiations of both political and semi-military character in keeping with British guarantees of Rumanian independence.

Among the questions to be considered, it was believed in informed quarters, are new munitions and arms factories—to make Rumania independent of German-controlled sources of supply—and a possible naval base near Constanza, on the Black Sea.

Oil, timber and cotton experts were included in the British delegation and the subject of a new pipeline and a refinery to supply oil directly to a Black Sea naval base presumably will be discussed.

Rumanians in Berlin

Berlin, April 24 (AP).—A group of Rumanian economic experts arrived here today for trade talks with German officials.

Cuba Dissolves Spanish Fascists

Havana, Cuba, April 24, (INS)—The Cuban government late today ordered immediate dissolution of the Falange, the organization of Spanish Fascist supporters of Gen. Franco.

The order was issued under a law prohibiting the existence of "anti-democratic foreign organizations."

Falangistas, particularly active in Cuba since Franco's troops occupied Madrid, have engaged in several disordily clashes with Cuban radicals.

France Curbs Propagandists; Envoy Returns to Berlin Today

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 24.—France prepared tonight to send back her ambassador to Berlin, Robert Coulondre, after ordering dissolution of propaganda organizations in the fortified zone along the German frontier.

France's ally, Great Britain, returned her envoy to Berlin today. The British ambassador, Sir Nevile Henderson, like Coulondre, was withdrawn last month in what was regarded as a diplomatic rebuke to Germany for her annexation of Bohemia and Moravia. Germany in turn called home her ambassadors from Paris and London.

Foreign office sources said Coulondre probably would leave Paris tomorrow.

Diplomatic quarters reported the French action was taken in the same spirit as the British, which Prime Minister Chamberlain said had "no special significance." Officials sought to dispel with denials all intimations that a special mission was involved in Coulondre's return.

The government disclosed today that orders had been issued to three organizations in Alsace-Lorraine, territory which France regained from Germany after the World War, demanding they cease propaganda activities and disband.

They were the "Young Men's Group" led by the Prussian-born autonomy leader, Hermann Bickler, the Erwin von Steinbach Club and the Alsatian People's Intellectual and Cultural Union.

The decree, approved by the cabinet last Friday but kept secret until today, was the last of a series of three voted last week. The first was directed toward disbanding propaganda associations which function in France on funds received from abroad and the second prescribed prosecution of persons or groups fomenting hatred or discord among French citizens on racial or religious bases.

Belgium Acts To Erase Deficit

Brussels, April 24 (AP).—The Belgian cabinet today approved the text of a bill to give the government for six months "special powers to deal with financial measures, excluding any change in the monetary system," to enable it to wipe out a budget deficit of 850,000,000 francs (about $23,758,000). The bill will have to receive parliamentary approval.

Landon Backs Bill to Admit Child Exiles

Other Witnesses Fire Away at Proposal At Final Hearing

Hearings on the Wagner-Rogers resolution to admit 20,000 German refugee children into the United States, above the quota limitation, were concluded yesterday as a barrage of witnesses attacked the measure and Alfred M. Landon, 1936 Republican Presidential nominee, gave it his qualified approval.

In a letter to Clarence E. Pickett, acting executive director of the Nonsectarian Committee for German Refugee Children, Landon said he favored the resolution "authorizing relaxation of our immigration restrictions to the maximum of 10,000 German children in 1939 and 1940 under 14 years—although I wish the age limit were younger."

Parents Considered

Landon added that "I do think there is some danger of a demand subsequently that the parents of these children receive special consideration. That will create another heartrending situation."

John B. Trevor, president of the American Coalition, whose board of directors, he said, represents 115 patriotic, civic and fraternal societies, alleged that the refugee children "will be absorbing resources for their care and maintenance which ought to go to American children." The proposed resolution provides that children will be admitted only under private sponsorship, with a guarantee that they will not become public charges.

"Every argument advanced in favor of this resolution," Trevor declared, "is equally valid for the admission of thousands of refugee Spanish children . . . and for admission of millions of Chinese children who have been driven from their homes, or whose parents have been slain."

"The overwhelming majority of our fellow-citizens has neither the intention nor desire to turn this country into an orphan-asylum for the indigent children and refugees of all the world," said Trevor.

"Charity begins at home," testified M. W. Postman, financial secretary of the Adam Hats Employes Association.

"Do you think it ends there?" asked Senator King (Democrat), of Utah.

Herman Miller, national secretary of the Patriotic Order, Sons of America, said that aliens in America are guests and "ought to obey the laws and keep their mouths shut." He was for America "first, last and forever," he added.

600,000 Seen in Future

J. H. Patten, of the State Council, Junior Order, United American Mechanics and other organizations, warned that the 20,000 children will increase to 600,000 in a few generations.

"Would that be an asset or liability—to have 600,000 more persons steeped in American traditions?" inquired Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey.

"I don't know," the witness replied.

drawal of land and sea forces from Spain.

The message Henderson carried to Berlin will advise Hitler that slamming of the door on Roosevelt's long-term non-aggression and world conference proposals would, in Britain's opinion, bring the tense international situation almost to the breaking point.

The ambassador was instructed to tell the Germans that Britain's negotiations for a defense pact with Soviet Russia should not be regarded either as an act of war or the pretense for war.

To Push Alliance Plans

Henderson will add that, unless the Fuehrer's Reichstag speech give tangible evidence of a change in the aggressive policy of the Rome-Berlin axis, the British, in concert with the French, will push ahead to complete the "grand alliance," including the projected pact with Turkey and the Anglo-French-Soviet triple entente.

At the same time, the British moved in talks with visiting Rumanian Foreign Minister Gafencu to bring Rumania solidly into the Anglo-French orbit by extending that country a loan to help it evade economic domination by the Nazi Reich. At least $10,000,000 would be advanced to Rumania at the beginning.

Frontier Withdrawal Asked

Henderson's "last appeal and warning," which was approved by France, will confront Hitler with the suggestion that deeds, not words, must now be forthcoming to test the Fuehrer's professions of peaceful intentions. Although Chamberlain in Commons yesterday said Henderson's return to Berlin had "no special significance," it was learned the ambassador will deliver the following three-point proposal:

The withdrawal of all remaining German military and aviation forces from Spain.

Withdrawal of troops massed at ing German military aviation and naval forces from Spain.

Henderson, it was learned, asked for the earliest possible appointment with Hitler and arranged to interview German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop before the Fuehrer delivers his nervously awaited Reichstag address.

As inducement Sir Nevile will advise Hitler that in the event the Nazi dictator agrees to this method, Britain and France will co-operate fully to meet and satisfactorily adjust the colonial and economic claims of both Germany and Italy.

But if the Reichsfuehrer refuses this "final offer" Sir Nevile is expected to tell him bluntly that Britain is ready to introduce military conscription and to take all other means, in concert with France and probably Soviet Russia, to resist by instant force any further aggression.

Lothian Asks Conscription

[Conscription, which Winston Churchill and the Marquess of Lothian, just appointed Ambassador to the United States, publicly advocated in recruiting speeches in London today, is becoming the foremost topic of discussion throughout the country, the London correspondent of The Washington Post reported. The cabinet is expected to take it up at its regular meeting on Wednesday.—Editor's note.]

derstood, will be to watch over the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth in June. He and Lady Lindsay have occupied the solid, Georgian embassy on Massachusetts avenue for almost ten years, from November 12, 1929.

Lindsay, who will be 62 on May 3, returned to Washington in February after a vacation in England and revealed that he was about to retire.

Sir Ronald had sought unsuccessfully to retire last year. Anglo-American trade agreement negotiations, signed last November, kept him on.

Sir Ronald's position as dean of the diplomatic corps will pass to the Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel de Freyre y Santander.

Last night Sir Ronald declined to comment formally on his successor but pointed out that Lord Lothian was his friend of long standing and a frequent visitor at the embassy here.

"I am sorry to be leaving," the Ambassador said, "but I hope to see America often again—unofficially."

Lord Lothian has been known as the "Colonel House" of Lloyd George, and is credited with having written many sections of the Versailles Treaty. He is widely known in the United States and for years had identified himself as a champion of "treaty politics," as opposed to power politics.

He received his initiation into British governmental affairs when he went to South Africa as one of the group of young men who assisted Lord Milner in the pacification of the land immediately after the Boer War.

First gaining prominence as a journalist, in 1916 he became private secretary of the prime minister. Following the war he retired temporarily from politics and devoted himself to writing and Christian Science.

Received Title in 1930

Lord Lothian received his title in 1930, on the death of a cousin. Heir to the title is another cousin, now 15 years old.

Lord Lothian will leave his present post as governor of the Bank of Scotland to take the Ambassadorship. He is rated as "a conservative businessman."

Significantly, he has consistently maintained that the "British Empire is the outer ring of security for the United States. If it breaks down it will be replaced by forces which would gravely menace America." Recently he stated that the best guarantee of security was freedom of the seas, maintained by Great Britain, with the United States cooperating.

In recent years Lothian's views on the dictator-ruled nations have undergone a sharp change. Although he claimed that the "Cliveden" set and his membership therein was a Communist-created faction, he stated on several occasions his belief in an Anglo-German pact.

Cotton Prices Soar as Barter Talks Start With 3 Nations

U. S. Would Trade Surplus Crop For War Materials With Britain, Belgium and The Netherlands

Cotton prices, dragging for months, bounded upward yesterday as Secretary of State Hull revealed that this Government already has opened negotiations with Great Britain, Belgium and The Netherlands for a vast trade of surplus American cotton for strategic war materials, such as tin and rubber.

A wave of orders from abroad—something of a phenomenon in recent months, the Associated Press reported from New York, caused the price of cotton to be delivered next March to jump $1.85 a bale, hitting $39.40 a bale shortly after the opening. Other "futures" also advanced.

The first burst of buying was attributed to last Saturday's agreement between Southern Senators and President Roosevelt to subsidize cotton exports by payments of about $10 a bale to exporters.

Kennedy Negotiates

Then came Hull's revelation here that Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy in London had begun negotiating, under the plan announced some time ago by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, to cut still further the price-depressing cotton surplus in the United States.

Byrnes had said it was hoped that 2,000,000 bales of cotton might be traded but Hull revealed that instructions sent to Kennedy had mentioned a surplus here of 11,000,000 bales of cotton and 80,000,000 bushels of wheat as the basis on which Kennedy could work.

The negotiations being conducted by Kennedy were said to have made greater progress than those under way with other countries.

Hull said it was too early, however, to say what Britain's reaction had been.

Any barter agreement reached will provide that the products exchanged must be kept on deposit as a reserve, unless the prices go above stated figures. Officials say that in this way the deals would not interfere with the normal course of trade.

I KNOW FOUR ROSES IS ALL WHISKEY AT LEAST 4 YEARS OLD — IS THAT WHY YOU SAY IT'S AMERICA'S FINEST WHISKEY?

AGE IS MIGHTY IMPORTANT, JIM — BUT IT'S ONLY ONE OF 5 REASONS WHY FOUR ROSES IS TOPS!

DO YOU KNOW

1 Aging improves a good whiskey, but it can't make a poor whiskey good. So all the whiskies that go into Four Roses are outstandingly good to start with.

2 All of them are at least 4 years old—old enough to be bottled in bond. And they would be bottled in bond, if we thought they would be as good, sold separately that way.

3 But our 74 years' experience has taught us that the finest whiskey is made by combining several of our whiskies into one whiskey that's finer still.

4 Then we purposely make Four Roses lighter and milder, by reducing it to 90 proof (instead of the stronger 100 proof which bottled-in-bond whiskies must be).

5 Four Roses is ALL whiskey—with the mellowness of age, and the greatness that only generations of distilling skill can give. Compare it with any other whiskey made.

The Nonpartisan League, of Falls Church, is offering three candidates for posts on the town council, which will be filled at the town election June 13. Charles E. Kellogg will be the candidate from the first ward; Charles Pendleton in the second ward, and Lawrence Laing in the third ward. The incumbents, whose terms expire September 1, are R. E. Ankers, Joseph G. Smith and Thomas Probey, none of whom have indicated whether they seek re-election.

Kellogg is with the Fur Research Department in the United States Biological Survey. He has resided in Falls Church for seven years. Graduate of the University of Nebraska, he served in the Army during the World War, is a member of Falls Church Post No. 130, American Legion, and has been active in Boy Scout work.

Pendleton is employed in the U. S. Veterans' Administration and has lived in Falls Church for 20 years. He served as a lieutenant in field artillery during the World War, is a member of Falls Church Post, No. 130, American Legion; treasurer of the new Falls Church band citizens association, member of the Music Study Club and active in the Community Theater.

Laing has lived in Falls Church for 21 years; is a member of the D. C. bar and is an attorney in the General Accounting Office. He is a member of the Young Democratic Club, the Lantern Club and the Community Theater.

Religious Education Council

Herndon—The Fairfax County Council of Religious Education will be held in the Herndon Congregational Church Friday, beginning at 2:30 p. m.

C. C. Carr, of Fairfax, president, announces the program will open with devotional exercises by the fifth and sixth grades of the Herndon School, directed by Miss Fannie Ferris.

There will be a group discussion for leaders of children, young people and adults. The Rev. Minor C. Miller, State secretary of religious education, will speak.

Dr. C. Sturgis Ball, of the Episcopal Theological Seminary at Alexandria, will speak on "Youth Seeks a Sense of Worth and Basis of Faith." The Rev. Marshall Milton, rector of St. Timothy's Episcopal Church, Herndon, will also speak.

A banquet will be served at 6:30 p. m. by the Corban Club, Mrs. George Bready, in charge.

Dr. Horace E. Cromer, president of the Washington Federation of Churches will speak at 8 p. m. on "The Place of the Church ni a Democracy."

Miss Katherine Groh, of Herndon, will lead the discussion of children; Dr. Ball, of young people group, and the Rev. J. H. Bean, pastor of the Southern Methodist Church of Leesburg, of adults.

Edward Arnold, of McLean, is vice president of the council and Mrs. Holden Harrison secretary-treasurer.

D. A. R. Historians Named

Fairfax—Mrs. Anna B. King, Mrs. Stephen C. Stuntz, Mrs. Edwin Bethel and Mrs. Joseph Berry, all of Vienna, have been appointed by the regent, Mrs. W. C. Welburn to compile the history of the Fairfax County Chapter, D. A. R., for the celebration of the thirty-fifth anniversary of its founding in October, 1940.

Mrs. H. Wilson Petty, of Arlington; Miss Anita Howard, of Alexandria, and Mrs. I. Richardson Pierce, of Vienna, have been named to revise the chapter's by-laws to conform to those of the national society.

Moore to Speak

R. WALTON MOORE, counsel for the State Department, will speak at ceremonies marking the 332d anniversary of the landing of the Jamestown settlers at Colonial National Historical Park Sunday. The park will be dedicated on that date, with Gov. Price taking part in the program.

Injunction Granted In Wage-Hour Case

Baltimore, April 24 (AP).—Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut issued a permanent injunction against the Eastern Shore Hosiery Mills today, enjoining the firm from violations of provisions of the United States wage-hour act.

Leo H. McCormick, wage-hour administrator for Maryland, said the injunction was the first issued in this State.

Leon J. Mogel, operator of the mills at Berlin, Md., offered no objection to the decree and signed a stipulation with Government counsel agreeing to pay restitutions to 45 employes totaling approximately $1,400.

There will be magic, talkies and refreshments, and no charge for admission or collection.

Wright to Visit Pythians

Grand Chancellor Fred Wright, of the Knights of Pythias, will pay an official visit to the Alexandria lodge of the order this evening at 7:30 o'clock, when the rank of page will be conferred upon three candidates.

Plans will be formulated for the Grand Lodge of the order to be held in Alexandria in October next, and committees formed to arrange the gathering. More than 500 members of the Knights of Pythias and the Pythian Sisters are expected to attend.

Citizens Hear C. W. Friend

Carter W. Friend, district manager of the State employment bureau, with headquarters in Alexandria, spoke at the meeting of the Sixth Ward Citizens Association last night in Potomac Community Hall.

Miss Lucy Houston, superintendent of the city playgrounds, also spoke on the endeavors of her department in caring for children during the school vacation.

Special Grand Jury Called

A special grand jury has been summoned for 10 o'clock Friday morning, in the Corporation Court, Judge William P. Woolls to preside. Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan will present a number of criminal cases, and the jury summoned is Joseph Hayman, Chester W. Fannon, J. Hugh Rollins, C. S. Taylor Burke and Joseph H. Newell.

Auto Death Accidental

Dr. Lewellyn Powell, city coroner, gave a verdict of accidental death in the investigation of the fatal injury to Pearl Hysong, 40 years old, colored, of 1303 M. street southwest, Washington, on Friday night last.

The car which struck the woman was driven by Miss Ruth Sherier, of 2229 King street, and the accident happened in Memorial Circle on the Mount Vernon boulevard, when the woman and a companion, Helen Colbert, also of Washington, were walking north on the boulevard.

Stricter Liquor Law Enforcement Urged In Prince Georges Grand Jury'e Report

Prince Georges County
Bureau of The Post,
42 University Rd., Calvert Hills, Md.
Telephone GReenwood 3359.

Stricter enforcement of the liquor laws and the purchase of "at least two machine guns and two tear gas guns" for the police department was recommended yesterday by the Prince Georges County Grand Jury at the close of its 10-day session at Upper Marlboro.

The jury report was silent on gambling, which has been under close scrutiny by State's Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, jr., for several months. Wheatley, who had been expected to submit evidence to the jury against "higher-ups" in the "numbers" racket, remarked that the success of any drive against gambling depended on whether Gov. O'Conor signs the antilottery measures passed by the recent General Assembly. They provide for search warrants against places suspected of harboring gambling activities and for making possession of gambling paraphernalia prima facie evidence of guilt.

There was no mention either of the 3½-year-old unsolved murder of Corinna Loring nor of the mysterious kidnaping of Mary Brown, Oxon Hill schoolgirl, last November. Both cases were reviewed by the jury.

The jury recommended that the board of license commissioners refuse to renew the licenses of persons convicted of violating the regulations governing the sale of intoxicants.

The county also was asked to install 12 police call boxes in outlying sections to enable officers on patrol duty at night to keep in touch with their office. The same request was made by last year's jury, but it was voted down by the board of police commissioners because of the cost.

The jury also urged that officials of incorporated towns, whenever serious crimes occur within their incorporated limits, immediately notify the State's attorney "so a trained officer may be dispatched to the scene."

Conditions in the jail at Upper Marlboro were described as "very good," but at the Hyattsville lockup the jury found conditions "generally bad." No further recommendations were submitted, however, in view of the fact that the present lockup will be abandoned this summer when the new county service building is completed.

Declaring the police force "undermanned," the jury urged that the duty of carrying insane and sick persons to institutions be returned to the sheriff's office. Members of the Hyattsville police substation were commended for their efforts in installing a fingerprinting and photographic bureau.

The jury expressed appreciation to the Metropolitan Police Department of Washington for transmitting police calls for the county department and for "splendid co-operation in law enforcement work."

Improvements to the interior of the Alms House and the establishment of a separate room for "very sick and weak" inmates was asked by the jury.

Wood Fire Sweeps 11 Acres

Lanham.—Fire swept over 11 acres of wooded land in this community yesterday, threatening half a dozen frame dwellings.

Volunteer fire companies from Bladensburg, Glendale, Riverdale and Riverdale Heights fought the blaze for more than three hours. Firemen said it spread from a trash fire started by two residents.

Wheatley Convicts Five

Upper Marlboro—Out of 38 criminal cases disposed of in circuit court so far, State's Attorney Winship Wheatley, jr., has lost only two, court records showed yesterday.

Wheatley obtained convictions in five cases which went to trial. Guilty pleas were entered in 17 cases and please of no defense in two others. Twelve old cases, which have been docketed for several terms of court, were continued.

Look at the Fat I've Lost!

Now you can slim down your face and figure without strict dieting or back-breaking exercises. Just eat sensibly and take 4 Marmola Tablets a day, according to the directions.

Marmola Tablets have been sold to the public for more than thirty years. More than twenty million boxes have been distributed during that period.

Marmola is not intended as a cure-all for all ailments. This advertisement is intended only for fat persons who are normal and healthy otherwise and whose fatness is caused by a reduction in the secretion from the thyroid gland (hypo-thyroidism) with accompanying subnormal metabolic rates. No other representation is made as to this treatment except under these conditions and according to the dosage as recommended.

We do not make any diagnosis as that is the function of your physician, who must be consulted for that purpose. The formula is included in every package. Start with Marmola today and win the slender lovely figure that is rightfully yours.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

DELICATE IN FLAVOR
MODEST IN PRICE

Over the long years, Mount Vernon has been a highly favored whiskey. And the reasons for its popularity are founded, of course, in this superb rye itself. It has always been marked by a rare and delicate flavor that appeals to discriminating drinkers. It has never deviated from those standards of excellence for which it has long been noted. And today Mount Vernon is so modestly priced that almost everyone can afford to enjoy it.

Pneumonia Skin Tests Described Here

State Health Officers Also Hear Parran Urge Pure Food Laws

Skin tests to determine susceptibility to pneumonia, as a prelude to preventive vaccination, were described yesterday by Dr. L. D. Felton, of the National Institute of Health, who declared the disease was likely to prove serious or fatal to nearly 10 per cent of the American population.

He told delegates to the conference of State and Territorial Health Officers at the Public Health Service Building that through tests on the entire population those highly susceptible could be discovered and immunized by vaccination.

Trichinosis Blamed on Garbage

Human trichinosis is chiefly caused by the practice in many large cities of feeding uncooked garbage to pigs Dr. W. H. Wright, United States Public Health Service, said. He added that 52 per cent of 763 cities over 10,000 population fed their garbage to pigs, and only 2 per cent of those towns cooked the garbage first.

Surgeon General Dr. Thomas Parran, opening the conference, pointed to the "definite need for increased health expenditures if the Nation as a whole is to enjoy the ultimate in freedom from disease."

Urging consideration of the recommendations of the National Health Conference, he stressed the importance of training personnel and economizing on administrative expenses.

Cafe Code Prepared

A code to regulate eating and drinking establishments, similar to the milk code has been prepared after studies by the sanitary section of the National Institute of Health and will be presented to the board in a few months, Senior Sanitary Engineer Leslie C. Frank, United States Public Health Service, revealed. Codes for frozen desserts and water supplies are also being studies, he added.

Efforts of the Federal Trade Commission to protect the public from dangerous drugs in foods, medicines, and cosmetics by control of advertising were described by Senior Surgeon K. E. Miller, medical adviser to the commission.

Urges Modern Laws

He urged the State groups to seek modern food and drug acts in their States, to co-operate with Federal laboratories in examining products and providing expert medical testimony at hearings in their States; and to conduct a systematic educational campaign against dangerous drugs.

A plan to utilize existing State machinery in providing death certificates to support claims for social security payments was described by Willard C. Smith, chief of the vital statistics and population unit, Bureau of Old Age Insurance, Social Security Board. Dr. Halbert L. Dunn, chief statistician for vital statistics of the Census Bureau, also spoke.

Dr. Lobingier to Speak

Dr. Charles S. Lobingier, professor of legal evolution and philosophy at National University Law School, will discuss the Trial Examiner, Continuation of an Ancient Office before the Roccobono Seminar of Roman Law in America at 8 p. m. this evening at the Cosmos Club.

Famed Scientists Elsewhere Become Mere Sightseers Here

Some Discuss Politics, Some Venture Into Shop Talk; Most Comment on America and Washington—and Rush Off to Catch a Bus

Two very massive accomplishments are tucked under the belt of massive Prof. Herbert M. Evans, of the University of California. He discovered the 48 chromosomes in man—those do-jiggers that determine whether you have blond hair, color-blindness or a square head—and the existence of fat soluble vitamin E, essential for mammalian reproduction.

EVANS

"I've done utterly nothing worth reporting. This little paper I'm giving at the National Academy, just deals with degrees of fertility," he said yesterday.

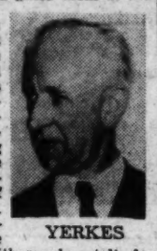
"At Toronto, though, in a couple of weeks, it's something else again. Talking about Alpha Tocopheral. Seven-tenths of a milligram of the stuff assures normal function of the male generative system."

"You mean a fraction of a milligram of this thing given daily assures a man of being able to produce children?" he was asked.

"A man? Nonsense, sir. White rats!"

Proffesor Yerkes Dines His Friends

When Prof. Robert M. Yerkes descends on Washington from Yale Medical School he rounds up friends and relatives and dines them at the Cosmos Club.



YERKES

At Yale, his most constant companions are apes, and he and his associates have made startling and fascinating revelations concerning the language and communication media of gorrillas. Dr. Yerkes, however, says he hasn't fooled with monkey talk for many years.

Among the apes, it appears, the males wear the pants, but having clearly established their dominance, allow the female certain privileges, varying according to the season.

"Striking parallel in human relations," adds Dr. Yerkes, his deeply-lined face breaking into a slow smile.

Might See Atoms, Rather See the Sights

Yesterday was a tiring occasion for one of Denmark's foremost physicists, Dr. Niels Henrick David Bohr, who came down from Princeton, where he has spent several months of research in the field of atomic problems.

BOHR

Trotting with a strife which belied his 54 years, Dr. Bohr paused only long enough on the National Academy of Science steps to indicate his disinclination to speak on the staggeringly complex subject which won him the Nobel Prize in 1922. In fact, Dr. Bohr talks seldom, and when he does, it is largely with his eyes, deep blue, buried under the shaggiest of brows.

Was it agreeable to study at Princeton? The eyes light up and the answer rings with sincerity. "To work in America? Oh, that is a pleasure. Always I enjoy my stay very much here."

Stoop-shouldered, he trotted off to the sightseeing bus, atomic considerations giving way to those of the tourist.

Scientist Millikan Critical of New Deal

Nobel Prizeman Robert A. Millikan believes a scientist can be a citizen of the world as well. In the former capacity he presents papers on the cosmic ray to National Academy of Science gatherings. In the latter capacity he airs his view in the academy's corridors.

MILLIKAN

One of the few scientists who will talk outside his field, Cal. Tech's most distinguished faculty member indicated yesterday he is still critical of the New Deal. Previously the atom chaser had publicly warned that "excess Government may spoil the American dream," that Americans have descended lower than the cows, who at least have no "thought of going to Washington for a previously-digested cud."

"These Government-aided scientific projects, WPA things and what not? I don't see much good that's come from them. Some, perhaps, but lots of evil."

"The obvious thing about this whole philosophy of government help is the destruction of the initiative of the people."

Savant Says Science Has No Morality

Tweedy, British, be-mustached Sir William Henry Bragg, K.B.E., F.R.S., D.SC., 77-year-old scientist whose work on X-rays and crystal structures brought him the Nobel Prize, learning's loftiest laurel, delivered the Pilgrim Trust Lecture at the National Academy of Science last night.

BRAGG

Sir William views the perilous plight of his homeland with philosophical calm.

"Of course a good deal of the effort of science is diverted nowadays to its application for war," he commented yesterday. "But after all, science is merely knowledge. It has no morality at all. If it falls in the hands of evil persons working for evil ends, we, as scientists, can do nothing about it. To the question of whether Eve should have eaten the apple of knowledge, with all the ills that meal created, the pure scientist can only answer, 'Yes.'"

Science Told To Talk So Man Can Understand

Science

Hill, told a surprised group that by merely applying a drop of potassium chloride to a tiny cell of plant life, they distinguished a "heart beat," similar to that in human life.

Further, they reported, a number of irregularities common to the human heart beat were found to coincide with manifestations of the plant cell.

An electrical detector was used to determine cancer in the breasts of mice a week before the growth can be felt mechanically, Dr. H. S. Burr, of Yale University reported. This length of time in mice would correspond to several months in a human, he said.

Body Is a Dynamo

He explained that the evidence obtained indicates that the body is a dynamo which is constantly pouring out electrical energy. Every body change—from cancer, a wound, or even from eating—is reflected, he believes, by a change in the electrical potential, recordable with sensitive instruments.

In another report, Karl Sax, Harvard University scientist, told of new research in X-ray cancer treatment, declaring that recent findings show that intermittent X-ray treatments, of low intensity, prove less harmful to surrounding tissues than concentrated "doses."

Dr. R. W. Wood, of Johns Hopkins University, told the scientists that by twisting two prisms, or wedges of glass used to break up light into its component parts, it was possible to measure stellar velocities more accurately than heretofore.

He predicted that the new stellar stereoptican might aid in solving one of the universe's major mysteries—the movement of light lines when viewed through a spectroscope grating aimed at the red side of a rainbow.

Scientists disagree in interpreting the phenomenon, some holding the universe is expanding, others taking it to indicate that the cosmos is shrinking.

Dr. Wood pointed out that the stellar stereoptical added a third dimension to pictures of the stars' light, refracting the violet and ultra-violet bands to one end of a screen, and the infra-red bands at the other.

Collisions of Stars

Dr. Fred L. Whipple, of the Harvard Observatory, gave new credence to the theory that "supernovae" of stars which suddenly flame into brilliance and then return to a normal condition, are actually collisions of stars in space.

The talking machine, which synthesizes speech itself from variations of self-made sounds and is in no way a mere reproducing instrument like a phonograph or radio, was described by Dr. Homer Dudley, of the Bell Telephone laboratories, makers of the machine.

Basic Vowel Sound Analyzed

The basic vowel sound was analyzed, filtered into groups whose characteristics of power and frequency were determined, and translated into 11 electrical currents, controlling the pitch, overtones and volume. The consonant sounds are reproduced from a gas-filled vacuum tube, producing a mixture of all frequencies. These, too, are controlled and mixed by the analyzer.

10 in Solitary Following Near-Riot at Occoquan

Solitary confinement was the punishment meted to ten Occoquan Reformatory inmates yesterday following a disturbance that reached near-riot proportions Sunday.

Reports from the reformatory revealed the trouble started when a "sulky" prisoner refused to obey orders of a guard. He was placed in "solitary" and about 50 other prisoners staged a protest demonstration that ended with the mass confinements.

Supt. Ray L. Huff reported to Director of Public Welfare Street that the "situation is in good control."

Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, yesterday asked Congress to amend the District traffic act to allow CCC drivers stationed outside the Capital to operate here without a D. C. permit.

Our National Legacy

It has been pointed out that the musical edifice of Johann Sebastian Bach rests upon the traditional German airs. That single fact suffices to make apparent the importance of the work that is being accomplished through the National Folk Festivals.

A great folk art is the richest possible legacy that any nation can bequeath to its professional artists. A folk culture is something that arises from the emotional relationships of man to his own earth, to the work of his own hands, and to his memories of race. Thus are produced those simple and vital patterns of expression which are capable of majestic expansion. Thus the Dyonisian rites were expanded into the grandeurs of Greek tragedy.

But such a legacy, like other legacies, may become forfeit, if left too long unclaimed by the heirs. The danger of this is especially great in an empire like America, so vast, composed of so many diverse racial strains, and subject to such rapid changes. Many vocational rituals have already disappeared. Others like the lumberjack ballads and dances, and the sailors' chanteys will vanish with another generation.

The National Folk Festivals, therefore, may be considered as annual inventories of that part of our national wealth which is never included in the statistical tables. And the inventories have shown these riches to be infinitely greater and more variegated than any of us dreamed.

Can We Afford Health?

A striking answer to questions as to whether the American people can afford health is given in a pamphlet entitled "Toward a Healthy America" just published by the Public Affairs Committee. The author is Paul de Kruif, one of the country's leading crusaders against unnecessary death from preventable disease.

Science has made remarkable progress in perfecting new weapons against disease. Pneumonia is rapidly yielding to both serums and drugs. The physician's knife and X-ray give the victims of cancer a much better chance for survival than they had a few years ago. Syphilis may be successfully cured by artificial fever or safe doses of drugs over a relatively short period. Many other causes of death and suffering could be virtually wiped out by the general application of well-established medical practices.

Yet, as Mr. de Kruif points out, the annual loss of life, unemployment and distress resulting from maladies that may be controlled is appalling. Many physicians and scientists are devoting their lives to the task of minimizing human ailments, but society as a whole is failing to make the most of their work. "Fully one-third of the Nation's people—with small or no incomes—" says Mr. de Kruif, "get totally inadequate or no medical service at all."

The common excuse for this "lag between the discovery of our life-saving science and the use of it" is that the people can not afford the complete health service essential to wipe out numerous diseases. But that assumption is the point at which Mr. de Kruif's most vigorous challenge is aimed. Reduced to a minimum of words, his message is that bad health is bad business. He maintains with both good logic and ample concrete illustrations that "the cutting down of preventable sickness and death rates, the raising of the physical and mental strength and energy of the American people, will cut down the present enormous drain of sickness and death upon the Nation's pocketbook."

Michigan, according to Mr. de Kruif, wiped out a $500,000 yearly hospital bill for diphtheria by providing a preventive toxoid to all children of the State at a cost of $35,000. Hospitalization is especially expensive, whether the cost is borne by individuals or communities. If, as Mr. de Kruif asserts, tuberculosis can be made negligible within a generation, the result would be enormous savings to taxpayers.

This author sees no solution for the country's burden of preventable sickness in socialized medicine. In any event, he points out, the physician must be paid for his services in fighting disease, and he apparently believes that better work will be done if the traditional relationship between patient and doctor is maintained. What he does emphatically advocate is a nation-wide program of public health, emphasizing preventive measures as well as relieving present suffering.

In our preoccupation with questions of war and peace, of depression and unemployment, far too little attention has been given to the health of the people. Both Mr. de Kruif and the Public Affairs Committee have rendered a genuine service by re-emphasizing this critical need in clear and convincing terms. Their contribution will be especially appreciated in Washington, where an active fight for more adequate public health funds is going forward.

In Good Hands

In his foreword to the latest annual report of the American Friends Service Committee, Rufus M. Jones, the chairman, speaks feelingly of the work this splendid organization has done. During the past year, he says, this work "has been heavier than during any year since the peak period of child-feeding in Germany, and there has been no year in its history when it has been called upon to face a greater variety of momentous tasks."

It was inevitable that this should be the case. Each change of frontier in Europe, each turn of the screw by the totalitarian dictators against those who for religious, racial and political reasons have incurred their animosity, has increased the already staggering sum of human misery crying out for succor. Driven on by their deep concern to render what aid they can to the victims of man's inhumanity to man, the Quakers have also found their tasks multiplied because of the wholly justified confidence which has been placed in them.

Thus it is that the American Friends Service Committee report for 1938 reveals a steady broadening in the activities of this organization. At home, the committee has sponsored very constructive community projects in regions devasted by chronic unemployment, work camps, health clinics and institutes of international relations.

Abroad, the committee has performed other extremely notable services. In Spain, the committee was entrusted with the task of feeding child war-victims and its representatives did the job so well as to win the heartfelt gratitude of Nationalists and Loyalists alike. In Berlin and Vienna, the committee's centers rendered invaluable advice and assistance to the victims of the Nazi terror and helped instill new faith and hope among those compelled to live "in a 'suicide world,'" as the report has it.

A new prospective task, assigned to the American Friends Service Committee, is to supervise the selection and emigration of 20,000 children refugees from Germany, should Congress permit them to enter the United States outside the quota, as provided in the Wagner-Rogers bill. Undoubtedly one reason for the widespread support received by this humanitarian plan is the willingness of the Quaker body to administer it. That alone is an indorsement which stamps the plan as worthy of real support.

For in the hands of these splendid men and women the American people can be assured that this project will be carried out in a manner "consistent to the ideals of Christian love and impartial good will," to cite the description employed by the report in discussing the committee's extremely difficult but splendidly executed labors in Spain.

Lethal Changes

There is something very consoling about a gathering such as that which convened yesterday at the National Academy of Sciences. At a time when the world is distracted by fear of war, by a multitude of economic dilemmas and baffling social problems, the scientists are still happily able to concentrate all their attention upon such issues as the structure of water, the growth of planets and the seasonal effects of cosmic rays.

Among the speakers are many distinguished scientists who are contributing perhaps more than they themselves realize to the rapid transformation of civilization. The public is invited to hear their reports on the most recent achievements of science. But the speakers do not talk to the public. They talk for the benefit of their peers in terms which few editorial writers can hope to probe. M. Demerec, of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, told the academy, for example, that "Cytogenetic study is completed for 26 lethal changes induced by X-ray in the white-Notch region of the X-chromosome."

The scientists appear to have achieved, at least so far as their meeting yesterday was concerned, complete isolation from the disturbing events and problems of the day. Probably they come as near as is humanly possible to the state of imperturbability ascribed by Matthew Arnold to the stars:

Bounded by themselves, and unregardful
In what state God's other works may be,
In their own tasks all their powers pouring,
These attain the mighty life you see.

So far as science itself is concerned this undisturbed pursuit of truth is doubtless ideal. The scientist can sit in his ivory tower and ignore the tumult below while he probes into the mysteries of stellar space, or the reactions of cells to different stimuli. But there are signs that his function is not merely to probe the secrets of nature. There are signs that science itself must give more heed to the use mankind in general is making of the knowledge it reveals.

An increasing number of scientists have come to realize that their work needs interpretation to laymen as well as explanation to fellow scientists. Indeed, there is a growing belief that the greatest need of this generation is not so much more technical knowledge as a better synthesis and a more general understanding of facts and basic principles already known.

Of course, the bridging of this gap is not primarily a task for men of the laboratory. More effective interpreters of science are greatly to be desired. But wherever the responsibility for bringing it about, a closer relation between scientific wisdom and popular learning is becoming imperative.

An Axis Victory

Yugoslavia's pledge, promising "faithful collaboration" with Italy and Germany, constitutes a notable diplomatic victory for the Rome-Berlin axis. It unquestionably impedes the efforts of Great Britain, supported by France, to create a reliable eastern barrier against continued aggression on the part of the axis.

Yugoslavia would, of course, have been a logical member of such a defensive bloc. She lies directly in the path of Germany's push to the southeast. Her security has also been imperiled by the irredentist demands of Hungary, part of whose pre-war domain now lies within Yugoslavia's borders. And Italy's absorption of Albania threatens her from a third side.

Undoubtedly it was this last development which has swung Belgrade into line with the axis. Very persuasively it emphasized the country's vulnerability. Poland and Rumania have their backs to Russia and may, if the worst comes to the worst, call in that powerful nation for support. Greece and Turkey are on the Mediterranean and can be defended by British and French sea power. But with the Adriatic now an Italian lake, and with her communications with Greece mennaced by attack through Albania, Yugoslavia is isolated.

It would be an exaggeration to say, however, that by its promise of collaboration with Italy and Germany, Yugoslavia has thrown in her lot with the axis. Her position is in every particular defensive. She wants only to maintain her independence and since that cannot be reliably guaranteed by any British and French promises of support she is seeking to do so by assuming a wholly inoffensive position vis-a-vis Italy and Germany.

In other words, the action means that Yugoslavia will not now join any combination directed against the totalitarian dictatorships. In return for this pledge of abstention, she has the promises of Italy, Germany and Hungary that she herself will not become the object of aggression.

To be sure, these promises may prove of only temporary value. But in view of the fact that the Belgrade government had no alternative, any time gained is valuable. The breathing spell, for instance, should enable Croat and Serb and Slovene to forget their ancient differences, their recent animosities, and achieve that unity which Yugoslavia so desperately needs in the face of present European conditions.

New Face On The SEC

Throughout the brief life of the Securities and Exchange Commission it has been guided by capable men. It has secured the co-operation of the stock exchanges under its jurisdiction more by intelligent persuasion than by laying down arbitrary rules. By this method it has won the confidence of men controlling the exchanges and has achieved more effective regulation than would otherwise have been possible.

The appointment of Leon Henderson to fill the vacancy on the SEC, created when William O. Douglas was elevated to the Supreme Court, comes at a time when the policies of the commission appear to be well established. Nevertheless, there will be ample demand for the abilities of the new appointee. He will take to the commission a wide knowledge of economics and valuable experience obtained in various other branches of the Government service. Although he was not named chairman of the commission, his influence will probably be used to carry on the high standards laid down by Joseph P. Kennedy, James M. Landis and Mr. Douglas.

Satisfaction over the appointment of Mr. Henderson to this post is certain to be tempered, however, by the fact that it will deprive the Temporary National Economics Committee of his services as executive secretary. He has made a notable contribution to the broad-gauge study of the TNEC. And while his interest and participation in that work will doubtless continue, his surrender of the tiller at this stage seems unfortunate.

It used to be held that, "A woman's place is in the home," but now a woman's at home any place.

"Oh Say, Can You See?"

From Time.

In Wichita, Kans., President Ray Dumont of the National Semi-pro Baseball Congress announced that he planned to dress his umpires next season in stripes. He explained that, since semi-pros wear all sorts of colors, "the striped uniform . . . serves as the best contrast," denied that fans' shouts of "thief" and "robber" had anything to do with the proposed change.

Byrnes Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial today discussing the proposed merger of the PWA and the WPA under the Byrnes bill, you say that "the funds of the proposed consolidated agency are to be used solely for subsidizing State and local projects." This seems to imply that the States and local communities are to operate those projects which are not let out to contractors, instead of the Federal Government carrying on the operation as is now the case under the WPA setup.

In his radio speech last Sunday Senator Byrnes expressed himself as being vigorously opposed to turning over the WPA to the States and local communities. In a passage discussing the general principle of Federal vs. State administration of relief funds he pointed out that "if the United States Government should collect the money from the people and turn it over to the States with the power to determine how the money should be spent, it would mean in many States a dole for the able-bodied unemployed." In the event, however, that "if the law required a work program," he added, "we would have not simply 48 WPA's with different patterns in each State, but we would have several thousand different programs, because the money would be turned over to the towns and townships in the various States.

"Turning Federal funds over to the States for administration would mean more politics instead of less politics in administration. When Congress first appropriated funds for relief the administration was left to the States. The result was that in three States funds had to be withdrawn and in one State the Governor was indicted and convicted for misuse of funds."

Senator Byrnes' bill uses the terminology of grants to States and political subdivisions but Senator Byrnes cannot have in mind State and local operation of "force account" projects as distinct from "contract projects" in view of his vigorous condemnation of several thousand WPA's. If your interpretation is correct that the bill calls exclusively for subsidies to State and local projects then the bill ought to be amended to square with Senator Byrnes' philosophy.

Lost Taxes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "Replacing Lost Taxes," in The Post of April 21, says "The loss of tax revenues hitherto obtained from privately owned utilities acquired by the TVA has created some extremely difficult problems for the State, municipal and county governments affected by the transfer of ownership."

The money of Federal taxpayers poured into the TVA not only reduced greatly the cost of electric service, but more than proportionately increased land values in the areas served. A striking illustration of the effect of public improvements to increase the profits of land speculation under taxing methods that present all possible barriers to wealth production for the benefit of private land monopoly.

You note that representatives of the taxpayers down there now want more Federal money through the TVA to make up the loss in taxes formerly paid by the private companies, which would have the effect of bringing back the former costs of electrical service and leaving the people saddled with the higher land rents due to the TVA.

If the TVA board of directors had the least economic gumption or sense of the rightful interests of the ultimate taxpayers whose labor produces the country's wealth, it would not only reject the proposition but remind the Legislatures of the States involved of their power and right to recoup their losses in utility taxes by increasing the taxes on land values.

That would have the effect not only of retaining or further reducing the cost of electrical service, but of so cheapening lands as to give opportunity for self-support to the unemployed, more than a meager subsistence to debt-ridden tenant farmers and share croppers, and better living conditions all around.

The Main Question

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The major question facing the House committee investigating WPA is not, as The Post maintains, "whether there is any legitimate place for an organization of Federal workers temporarily employed on relief projects." Workers do not ask either their governments or their employers for the right to organize. Whenever they deem it necessary, as the heirs of a 300-year struggle to maintain the rights of man, to bargain collectively with their masters, they form a union in spite of what their masters do or say.

There is no period in the history of the American people when it was possible to subject 12,000,000 citizens to such a campaign of slander, misrepresentation, insult and degradation such as the unemployed have endured for the last ten years. These 12,000,000 have not only been forced to pay for the crimes of the robber barons. They have had to endure also the sneers and the slander of the apologists of those same still-flourishing bandits for daring to assert that they were still human beings who had the right to breathe the same air as their robbers.

The unemployed are the innocent victims of that class which used their democratic liberties in order to swindle the rest of the people out of theirs. While the enemies of the unemployed can afford to fill columns of newsprint with their propaganda, the unemployed can console themselves with the knowledge that they still have a free press in which the letters of their spokesmen may occasionally be printed.

The main question is not whether the unemployed will be permitted to exercise their rights. The main question is the question which will be asked not by reactionaries in Congress, not by editors of newspapers. The main question will come from the lips of those men and women who find themselves out on the street without a crust to eat. It will come from the lips of those who had been beaten by the police and gassed by the keepers of the peace when they assemble to petition their representatives for justice and jobs.

And when the time comes when these millions of the disinherited shall ask the question, who, I wonder, will there then be to answer them? PHILLIP BONOSKY, Organizer.

A Masterpiece

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I should like to thank you for printing in full Walter Lippmann's address before the D. A. R. It was a masterpiece, and at the end I felt the same hush that must have followed Lincoln's Gettysburg address. Nothing comparable to it has been printed or said for a long time.

Peter And Paul

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Post headline Saturday, April 22, said, "U. S. plans trust drive to speed up housing; suits projected against price fixing, other deterrents to building wave."

In the same breath it is reported that a Senate committee has applied a "prevailing wage amendment" to that part of the Federal Housing Administration plan which in the last three years produced Colonial Village, Buckingham and numerous other developments which give modest cost homes to thousands of American families. The inevitable result of such an amendment will be to increase the production cost of housing.

This whole scheme appears to be a "Peter and Paul" arrangement which cannot possibly benefit the home-buying public. Even if the Administration is successful in browbeating reduced prices out of the building industry, any gain made on that front will surely be lost by handing over the spoils to labor through the Administration-sponsored "prevailing wage amendment." The simple fact is that building material prices have declined substantially during depression 2, while labor cost (apparently depression proof) actually increased.

If the Administration is really interested in reducing the cost of housing and thereby bring decent dwelling quarters within the reach of the workingman, it should consider the following facts and ponder. I quote volume 5, No. 7, "Federal Home Loan Bank Review," April, 1939, page 212:

"Building costs and practices: Between the early months of 1936 and summer of 1937 the costs of both labor and building materials increased by 14 per cent and 12 per cent, respectively. Since that time, labor has remained at the same high level but material prices have declined (Chart C)."

If price fixing there be, it appears that labor at last has shown its heels to the building materials industry.

Price Too Great

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The present world can hardly find much hope and comfort in the expression "History repeats itself." History repeats itself at present only because some individuals are bent on returning to the law of the jungle and other barbaric trappings, and the rest of mankind is willing to tolerate such acts.

It is no longer a question whether or not the democratic nations of the world should call dictatorships on the carpet, but when; and there is never any time like the present time. The history of dictatorship is the history of war and conquest. The people of a civilized world cannot view the European situation which naziism and fascism have created, and take refuge in the Shakespearean neutrality of a "plague on both your houses."

The post-war period has produced many "isms" and ideologies, but any one can see that Italy of today is the same old Italian imperialism, and Germany represents the old desire to create "Mitteleuropa" with the "Drang nach Osten" concept. The Munich conference was far from a compromise; it was a downright retreat on the part of the democracies in the face of dictatorship. Just how long the world will be pushed around by dictators only time can answer. Free governments are so desirous of peace that they are willing to make concessions so long as they do not strangle their own political and economic systems.

The world wants peace, but the nations of the earth are far from willing to make the sacrifice to bring peace about.

The Post Impressionist

Life-Giver

WE DAWDLED over our drinks in silence. I watched the old man's face in the mirror behind the bar. There was an impish light in it. From time to time he ran his hand through his silvery beard. It was a long-fingered, delicate hand.

"I knew a man once . . ." he said, turning to me as though I were an old acquaintance. "He was a very marvelous, compleat man, and distinguished in his line." The old gentleman chuckled, and looked at me earnestly. Apparently he was satisfied with his scrutiny, for he continued.

"He was a professor of psychology at a big university. There wasn't anything he couldn't tell you about yourself. Or wouldn't," he added, with a mocking smile.

"I know, you see, because he was my brother."

The old man lifted his glass. Then he combed his whiskers once more with his fingers. His eyes lingered on his reflection in the glass, and for a moment I caught there a melancholy light. But it was gone in a glimmer of inner mirth. The old man seemed, somehow, to mock himself.

"He was a very important fellow in his day," he took up the theme again. "It was quite evident that he would be. Even as a boy there was no nonsense about him. He realized that he had a big job ahead—to make something of himself."

The old man stopped and stared fixedly into his glass. I wondered whether he had said all that he had on his mind to say. For, after all, these random confidences at bars are rarely for the entertainment of the auditor.

"He would believe that, if a man should put his mind to it, he could make a tree just as easily as he could make a poem.

"I remember how impatient he was when he caught me not doing anything.

"'I am "inviting my soul," as Walt Whitman advised,' I would tell him.

"'Bah!' he would answer, 'You have no soul. Nature gave you a few genes of an indifferent sort, but the rest is up to you. When you are "inviting your soul" you are rusting, deteriorating. Everything about you becomes flabby.'

"Did I think to tell you?" the old man asked, "that Frank—we'll call him Frank—was a very energetic man?"

There was another pause. Once or twice he brushed his hand over his eyes, as though to push away a vision, or to clear his sight.

"I wouldn't say anything against him," he said at last. "After all, he was my brother, and he was very kind to me, according to his lights. It was not his fault that I couldn't be exactly like him. For some reason," and here he looked at me with a side-long elfish look (if you can imagine such a thing in an old man), "nature failed to provide me with his superb self-confidence.

"Why, once . . ." he said, abruptly beginning to whisper, and fixing me with a look of strange intensity, "he tried to bring a dead woman back to life!

"She was a beautiful creature, and he was going to marry her. But nature presumed to interfere. She became ill and they told him that she died.

"He wouldn't put up with it," he almost shouted.

The old man's gaze became fixed, as though he were in a trance. It was apparent that now he saw nothing that was about him.

"I went to the room where she was," he said, in a dead monotone, "and I took her away from there. She couldn't die. She was young. Her body was good for 50 years. She was organically sound. She had a good mind. Her will was strong. And she loved me as I loved her.

"She couldn't die. She merely needed to be awakened.

"But they caught me. They took her away!"

Suddenly the old man shivered. The queer look left his face. He turned to me again, but his face had become pinched and gaunt.

"He tried to bring her back to life," he said, and chuckled in a way that made my blood run cold. Then he got up and ambled toward the door. His pace was that of an old man who was very tired, but there was strength in it, too.

As he disappeared the bartender paused in swabbing the moisture off the bar.

"Would you believe it?" he said, "that old coot used to be a professor at the university . . . but now he's nuts, completely nuts."

"Harmless, though," he added.

May Day

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Don't you think it is about time a steering committee was set up to keep the American Federation of Labor from wandering in circles? I refer specifically to its recent refusal to let members participate in a local May Day celebration.

True, there may be two or three Communists in the throng, but you can probably find as many within the Federation; in fact, with a little searching one might drag out a Republican or Jeffersonian Democrat. What does that prove? Nothing at all, except that this is supposed to be a democracy with room for anything.

May Day is American as corn pone and black-eye peas—it is as native as hot cakes and "Oh, Susanna"—only a few reactionaries want to take its celebration away from the workers and turn it into a silly farce about child health.

When you have a free and strong labor movement, you do not have to worry about child health—after all, it is poor people's children who die and the working people will see to it that we have more playgrounds, better housing, schools and hospitals—if the wage-earner is paid enough to support such things.

Woman With A Purpose

By Katherine Lackey

Miss Tarbell's Life

IN HER AUTOBIOGRAPHY, "All In the Day's Work" (Macmillan, $3.50), Miss Tarbell relates that when she published her life of Judge Gary, her "favorite newspaper" labeled its review "The Taming of Ida Tarbell," claiming that she had whitewashed a man whose type had always been detestable to her. At that time she was 63, an age to which most persons are content to be tamed.

Without going into the career of Judge Gary, it seems curious that Ida Tarbell should ever have been considered a radical, that she was ever classified as sufficiently revolutionary to be an object for taming. Nor can this be explained by the passing of time—for your true revolutionary retains his fiery aspect as long as he is remembered at all, and regardless of whether or not society has finally adopted his ideas and made them commonplace, or is still fighting against them. It is in a peculiar quality of mind, the possession of a "fanatic heart," that we must discover the enduring radical.

THIS MENTAL QUALITY, this fanaticism, disciplined or not, Ida Tarbell assuredly never had. Her many virtues, her high value as a human being, stem from a deeply conservative nature. Her fights were for specific reforms within the established order, amelioration of detail rather than change of any conception of human activity. Constantly in her life she was thrown up against the changers, only to veer off from a kind of extravagance in them that was unsuited to her temperament.

Lincoln Steffens, John Reed, Woodrow Wilson, Jane Addams—she admired them and gave them their due with the same equanimity as she rendered her justice to John D. Rockefeller, Judge Gary, or Mussolini. Not the rhetoric or rosy dreams of the one side nor the present realism and material magnitude of the other could lure her from the strait methodistical interpretation of what was "right."

AS SHE SAYS, she was almost born of pioneer stock. Her father was about to move his family from Pennsylvania to Iowa when the depression of 1857 delayed him and the discovery of oil in Pennsylvania, plus his own discovery that he could make money on barrels, effectually dispelled any vision of wide horizons he may have held. He took his family to a shack in the famous Titusville section and removed it ultimately to a substantial house in Titusville itself.

On the oil fields his daughter learned the difference between good and evil in black and white illustrations, also the effect of monopoly and rate-fixing by railroads. She reached young womanhood serious and with a "purpose"—that term so wrongly ridiculed by the career woman of today, whom it fostered and who now forgets that the adoption of ground-grippers 60 years ago did much to assure her the privilege of combining cosmetics with efficiency.

This purpose took her to Allegheny College, the only female in her class, led her to two years of school teaching and then to several years on the board of the Chatauquan, the organ of that admirable and long since neglected instrument through which middle-class America reached for enlightenment and largely found it.

"YOU'RE DYING of respectability," she heard a Scottish preacher thunder at his congregation when she had served eight years on the Chatauquan. Seriously and in the spirit of inquiry, she took the words of the preacher to herself and found them applicable. She threw up her job and went to Paris, arriving with $150 in her pocket, no editorial connections and the determination to make her way free-lancing, and in addition to write a study of Mme. Roland.

An earlier desire to study biology had fallen before her association with Chatauqua; Mme. Roland and the nature of revolution were displaced by McClure and his magazine. Like her father, she could not resist the immediately productive—and wisely did not try.

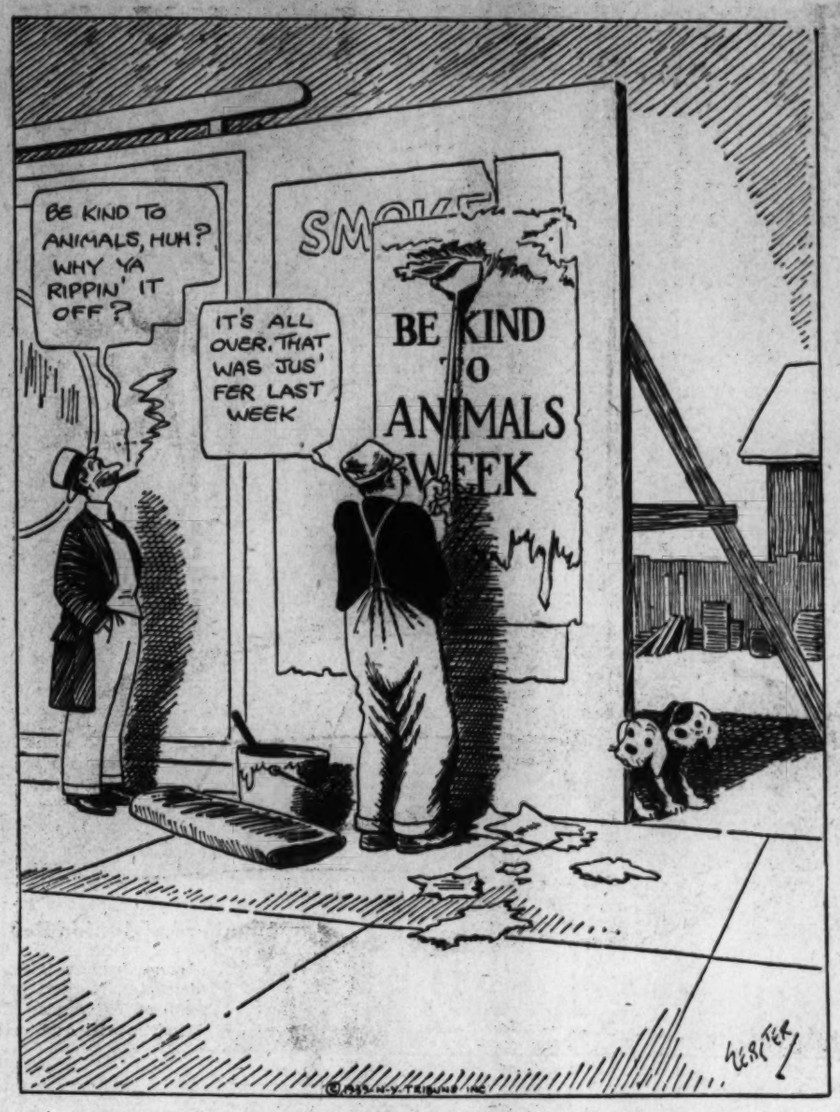
It was during the days with McClure that she wrote the history of Standard Oil that made her name; later, her other investigations into the working parts of the Nation's machinery became well known. There followed her association on the American, war service in Washington and Paris, further service on two Government conferences relating to labor and unemployment, under Wilson and Harding. These were crowded years, during which she seized the time to write and to develop an almost adoring regard for Abraham Lincoln.

IN 1924 she went on the lecture circuit and like John Cowper Powys, achieved a profound faith in and admiration for l'homme moyen sensuel of the American hinterland who for the most part constituted her audience. It was probably much the same audience for which she had writen in the Chatauquan and from which she herself stemmed.

At the age of 80 she still is working and her remarks on herself are about as just as any outsider might make. "I took on self-support at the start that I might be free to find answers to questions which puzzled me. After long floundering, I blundered into man's old struggle for the betterment of his life."

Perhaps the most significant statement for an understanding of the character of this woman is the fact that she retains today a desire to follow the three initial inspirations of her girlhood—the "purpose," Mme. Roland, and the working of the world as the microscope would honestly delineate it.

Life's Darkest Moment



Again A Cockpit

By Barnet Nover

The New Struggle In The Balkans

A GENERATION AGO a familiar prediction was: "War in the Balkans in the spring." The Balkan region was then the most turbulent part of the continent, the veritable cockpit of Europe.

The Balkans are again the cockpit of Europe. But this time the responsibility for this unhappy state of affairs does not lie with the Balkan States themselves. The warlike passions of Serb and Turk and Bulgar, of Greek and Rumanian and Albanian were slaked in the three wars that devastated the peninsula between 1913 and 1919. Since then, and particularly during recent years, the Balkan States have wanted nothing better than to be allowed to live in peace.

This, however, does not fit in with the plans of the great powers. So once again the peace of the Balkans may be shattered.

THE PEACE movement in the Balkans dates from 1933, that is from the time when the shadow of Hitler first began to darken the European horizon. But it was not Hitler but Mussolini who was, unwittingly, the prime mover in bringing the nations of the peninsula together.

Years before the Munich meeting, which saw the temporary triumph of his plans, Mussolini suggested a four-power Concert of Europe to regulate the affairs of the Old World and to provide a substitute for the League of Nations which he hated and despised. That plan died aborning. But the fact that both Great Britain and France had given it a measure of support frightened all the little states. It helped propel Poland into the arms of the Third Reich. And it made the Balkan nations realize their community of interests.

IN THE COURSE of the next year one Balkan set of rivals after another buried the hatchet. Greece made peace with Turkey. The monarchs of Bulgaria and Yugoslavia exchanged visits. And in February, 1934, Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey and Rumania signed a ten-year treaty guaranteeing the security of their respective Balkan frontiers and promising economic co-operation. Bulgaria stayed out of this group. She had territorial claims against Rumania, Yugoslavia and Greece which she first wanted settled. Yet three years later, the Sofia government did make a separate pact with Belgrade which, in a sense, concluded the Balkan peace bloc.

INDIVIDUALLY the Balkan nations are in no position to defend themselves against the attack of either of the totalitarian powers. Collectively, however, they represent a potentially powerful aggregation of force.

This fact is clearly understood in Berlin and Rome, in London and Paris. That is why during these recent weeks so intense a struggle has been going on to win over each of the Balkan states.

It would clearly be a great advantage to the British anti-aggression bloc to have the solid support of the Balkan entente. That is why, after having extended a guarantee of support to Rumania and Greece, Great Britain has made such strenuous efforts to win over Turkey and, if possible, to overcome the objections of Bulgaria to a program of co-operation with her neighbors.

ON THE OTHER hand the strategy of the totalitarian powers has obviously been to prevent the formation of a Balkan coalition directed against Berlin and Rome and, so far as possible, win over the states of the peninsula to "co-operation" with the axis.

To this end Mussolini invaded Albania which, to all intents and purposes he already controlled. Violence was hardly needed to make a satrapy of King Zog's kingdom. But violence could serve as a warning to others of what was in store for them if they did not play ball with the dictators.

The Albanian development clearly put Yugoslavia in a very difficult position. Public opinion in that country is anything but friendly to the axis powers. The overthrow of Premier Stoyadinovich, while largely the result of internal factors, was also the result of hostility to his pro-German and pro-Italian policy. But while the people of Yugoslavia may be pro-French and pro-British, circumstances have made it difficult and dangerous to pursue a pro-French and pro-British policy at this time. A prisoner in the Adriatic, which Italy now controls, Yugoslavia is almost surrounded by the axis powers and their satellites. Rather than court disaster, she has now made peace with Berlin and Rome.

WHAT DOES the agreement just reached by Yugoslavia with Italy mean?

It means that Yugoslavia will, temporarily at least, be assured that she will not be the next victime of German or Italian aggression, or, alternatively, be attacked by Hungary supported by the axis powers. In return, Yugoslavia has tacity agreed to be neutral in the event of a thrust by Hungary or Germany, or Italy, or all three, in the direction of any other Balkan power.

This definitely puts Rumania on the spot. In abandoning the claims she has had against Yugoslavia, Hungary clearly hopes to recoup herself at the expense of Rumania. And the lure of booty also may bring Bulgaria directly into the axis camp. Unless, therefore, Soviet Russia can be brought into the Balkan picture and unless Poland can be induced to make the Polish-Rumanian alliance binding in the event of a German, as well as of a Russian attack, Rumania's position may become parlous, despite the British guarantee.

In any event, the new-found peace of the Balkans is shattered, perhaps beyond rehabilitation. Little nations are not masters of their destinies. They are the unhappy pawns in the game of power politics which the major powers are playing with such frenzy and for such desperately high stakes.

Song Of A Goldfish

I was just a single goldfish,
Unimportant, fettered, blue,
But a college student saw me . . .
Now I'm a Harvard '42.

Just a goldfish in a fish bowl
With an orbit small and drear . . .
Now I move about a campus
And I've learned the college cheer.

I suppose I should be happy,
Yet there's something I bewail:
I had brothers in that fish bowl
And I fear they went to Yale.

Add similes: As plentiful as free lance economists in the United States.

J. L. P. says he has the low-down on what caused the sudden termination of that last Hitler broadcast. Hitler bit the battleship and quite a struggle ensued.

At last we are beginning to understand Hitler's understanding of the situation. Germany is a peaceful, happy, inoffensive, considerate country which everybody else is attacking, invading and confiscating.

Germany is the only country in recent history that liked life in a clubhouse so well that it wants to go back for a second visit.

Forty thousand dollars was found in an old piano in a St. Louis home. But we fail to see any reason for so much criticism. It's safer than a violin or cello.

World Waits Hitler Reply

By Mark Sullivan

Answer Due Friday

ON FRIDAY, Chancellor Hitler is expected to reply to President Roosevelt. The event is comparable to those exchanges that took place between Germany and President Wilson during the months preceding our entrance into the Great War. It is comparable, yet very different.

For us, everything depends upon whether Chancellor Hitler's reply calls for further statement or action, of an argumentative or more serious kind, by President Roosevelt.

If Hitler accedes to Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion, if he is willing to go on with what Mr. Roosevelt suggested, namely, a ten-year assurance of nonaggression and international conference looking toward reduction of armament and restoration of international trade—in that event, of course, the appropriate action called for from Mr. Roosevelt and America, will be a pleasing one to set about. In that event, Mr. Roosevelt, to the great benefit of the world, including America, would begin preparation for the international conference.

But suppose Chancellor Hitler's reply is either truculently defiant or evasively "stalling." In that event, what would be called for from President Roosevelt and the United States?

Mr. Roosevelt, in his message to Hitler and Mussolini, was careful to say he was "acting only with the obligation and responsibility of a friendly intermediary." But Mr. Roosevelt's message was not that perfunctory type of "tender of good offices" which neutral statesmen customarily send to nations at war or about to be at war. Such tenders, like the one President Wilson sent to the two combatants on the outbreak of the World War, are carefully impartial in tone. Mr. Roosevelt's message was not impartial in tone. Mr. Roosevelt in a sense acted as the spokesman for the whole of the world outside Germany and Italy, that part of the world which feels itself threatened by Germany and Italy.

MOREOVER, Mr. Roosevelt's message was accompanied within an hour by a display of our force, the sending of our fleet to the Pacific. That action was, of course, not directed against Italy and Germany, nor necessarily against any nation. Yet Hitler and Mussolini could hardly fail to observe the identity in time between the message to them and the conspicuous calling attention to our fleet.

If Hitler's answer on Friday is truculent and seems to call for further statement or action on the part of Mr. Roosevelt and the United States, what would our action be?

As it happens, on the same day that Hitler answers, Friday, our Senate Committee on Foreign Relations will conclude its hearings on neutrality, and will begin the writing of a new neutrality law. The law will be supposed to give force to whatever is to be the attitude of the United States toward warring nations and groups. The testimony before the committee ran the whole gamut of possible policies. At one end is the view held by Senator Nye, of North Dakota, that we should be rigidly punctilious to give no faintest aid or comfort of any kind to any nation engaged in war. At the other end of the gamut is the proposal of Senator Thomas, of Utah, and others, that in any war the United States should decide who are the aggressors and formally support the nonaggressors.

Assuming war between Britain and France on the one side, and Germany and Italy on the other, and assuming that the United States wished to give some degree of support to the former, what would we do? There are, as President Roosevelt has said, many "measures short of war." The degree of possible support might begin with a particular kind of change in our neutrality law, when the Senate makes changes a few weeks hence.

THE LAW as it now stands prevents the sale of arms by American manufacturers to any nation at war under any circumstances. We might change that in the way proposed by Senator Pittman. We might permit a nation at war to buy armament in the United States, providing the purchaser nation pays cash and thus assumes complete ownership of the arms before they leave our shores; and provided further that the purchaser nation carries the arms from our shores in its own ships. Such a change in our neutrality law would be a help to Britain, for she has the ships to carry the arms home, and the navy to protect the ships, while Germany's ships would be off the sea.

From such a beginning there are other degrees of help we might give to Britain and France. We might at a later stage remove all our restrictions on manufacture and shipment of arms, permit them to be bought on credit and to be shipped on our own vessels. At a yet later stage, we might, in ways short of actual war, dispose of our navy in such a way as to be of help to Britain and France.

The final stage would be actual participation in the war by us, in the sense of sending an army abroad. That would be the final stage. It would be, as American opinion now is, an unlikely stage. Our people, in their present state of mind, would not send an army abroad. No Congress reflecting American opinion, as it now is, would pass a conscription act. Our conscription act during the Great War, though it was not attempted until two months after we were in the war, was difficult enough to get through Congress.

Yet national emotion is subject to change. If what is here written had been written in the year 1914, doubtless it would have said with great confidence that America would never send an army abroad.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Neutrality Entanglement

IN TRYING to decide what to do about the neutrality act the members of the Senate Committee have an extraordinarily difficult problem. Senator Borah pointed out the difficulty last week when he asked whether it was not impossible for the committee to come "to any agreement which would be accepted as a neutral position." When he asked that question Mr. Borah came closer to the heart of the real question than has anyone else who has taken part in the debate.

Mr. Borah gave as his reason for the difficulty that "we," meaning American public opinion, "have practically passed upon who is an aggressor." Undoubtedly that is a great cause why it would now be difficult to have almost anything the Congress enacts "accepted as a neutral position." But the fundamental difficulty would exist if American public opinion were completely detached and morally indifferent on the issues in Europe and Asia. The essential difficulty confronting the committee is that it is compelled to legislate on neutrality at a time when a war is already being fought in Asia and at a time when all of Europe is in a state of war-like mobilization.

This means that Congress is compelled to change the rules of the game while the game is being played. Whatever it does or fails to do, the result will not be universally accepted as neutral. Senator Nye's law has placed Congress in a quandary where Congress is compelled to take a position, and almost any position it takes will immediately and vitally affect the course of events all over the world, will be construed throughout the world by every nation as an act of American national policy.

Cities Possibilites In European War

TAKE THE simplest case. Suppose Congress does nothing. Then on May first, when Section 2 expires, we shall have an embargo on munitions to belligerents, an embargo that is not being applied to Japan and China. Suppose that war breaks out in Europe. We shall then find ourselves supplying Japan, which is a partner of the axis, with munitions while we refuse them to Great Britain, France, and, if they are attacked, to Switzerland and the Netherlands. We shall be supplying munitions to the Asiatic partner of the axis while we are withholding them from the nations that were attacked.

SUPPOSE, then, that Congress re-enacts the whole of the existing law. In that event Congress will have reaffirmed so positively its insistence on the present act that the President would be morally bound to impose an embargo against Japan. The effect on Japan would be serious. The sudden change of policy in the midst of her war with China would be unneutral, and would give Japan the strongest kind of provocation to make a military alliance with Germany and Italy and to strike, while the British are preoccupied in the Mediterranean, at the Dutch East Indies and the adjacent regions.

If Japan is pushed into the arms of Germany, the axis will not only have gained a powerful ally, but what is worse, the axis will have a strong inducement to go to war now in Europe. For by going to war, the axis can shut off the military supplies that are now moving from this country to England, France and the Netherlands. The existing law, it must be remembered, permits exports of munitions in time of peace. It stops the exports only in war time. Therefore, the law as it is now framed, says that if Germany wants to stop the British and French from obtaining arms in the United States, Germany can do this by declaring war. This is a dangerous inducement to the war party at a time when the peace of the world is trembling in the balance.

SUPPOSE, then, that Congress goes still further, enacts the Nye-Clark-Bone mandatory embargo. Where does that leave us? It also means an immediate embargo against Japan, followed almost surely by a Japanese military alliance with the axis, creating a situation in which there are the strongest inducements to a triple attack on Great Britain and France. For having been deprived of American supplies the Japanese, who are already at war, will have to move. The axis will have acquired a willing, even an urgent ally, and at the same time it will be able to cut off the supply of munitions to the European democracies.

SUPPOSE, then, that Congress takes the opposite line, and revises the law so that supplies will not be sold to "the aggressor." This would compel Congress to declare a kind of war against Japan, and a kind of war is very likely to become a real war.

WE ARE, no matter what we do, in a position where no one will regard the action of Congress as neutral, where everyone will see that it favors one nation at the expense of another. We need not have been in this entangling position. We have entangled ourselves by Mr. Nye's legislation, and the only real way to disentangle ourselves is to repeal the legislation and take our stand once more on the principles of international law.

THIS IS MUCH the safest course, the most easily defensible, the most consistent with the sentiments and the interest of the American people. If we return to international law, we do not have to intervene in the Far East by changing our policy in the middle of the war. We do not have to challenge Japan at a time when Japan is inevitably in a desperate mood. We shall be able to take the neutral position which is that Japan and China may buy supplies here, in accordance with Articles VII and VIII of The Hague Convention of 1907 "on the Rights and Duties of Neutral Powers." We shall not be entangled in the extremely dangerous consequences that would result from applying an embargo in the middle of a war. We shall remove from Japan the provocation and the inducement to sign a military alliance with the axis and to precipitate a world war.

In regard to Germany and Italy we shall be taking a position which is legally and morally unassailable. On the other hand, we shall take away from them the hideous inducement to start a war in order to deprive their opponents of supplies that they can obtain only as long as there is no war. The act of repeal, on the other hand, would not only remove the inducement to strike quickly which we now offer to the axis, but it would be profoundly deterrent because it would be construed as making it possible for the coalition to resist successfully.

Repeal Declared The Safest Move

ABOVE ALL, repeal would protect the United States against finding itself in a horrible dilemma, once war broke out. For then with public sentiment what it is, with America's national interest what it is, we should at the outbreak of a war, after air raids on London and Paris and the overrunning of Holland and Switzerland, find ourselves compelled to refuse arms to the nations that engaged the overwhelming sympathy of the nation.

The argument now being conducted before the committees of Congress is emotional enough. Imagine what it would be in the midst of war itself. If, in the midst of war, we refused to amend the act, a great majority of the people would be horrified at the idea that they were helping aggression to succeed. And if, acting on our sentiments and what many would regard as our vital interests, we then amended the act, we should for all practical purposes have intervened in the war.

THE SAFEST course, I repeat, is to repeal the act and return to the elementary principles of international law. This is the only solution that can still be adopted which is legally neutral and can, therefore, be defended; it is the only solution which can enable us to escape the worst of all the entanglements of a neutral, the entanglement of changing his policy after war breaks out.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Is 39; Looks 29; Man of 26 Wants to Marry Her; Would She Be Foolish to Accept?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 39 years of age, have always lived a very quiet and sheltered life, have a good position and like my work. As a result, I look 10 years younger than my actual age. Last January I met a man 26 years old, who is now deeply in love with me. I have been around with men enough to feel that he is really sincere. His life, in contrast to mine, has been one of hard knocks and worry since he can remember. He has never had a home and feels, now that he has found the woman he wants, that I am very foolish to let age stand in our way. I have told him that I am 38.

Of course, I realize that when I am 50, he will still be a very young man. But then again, I may look 40 and he may look as old. He is already getting bald. Do you think I should marry him and take a chance on knowing happiness for a few years? Then, if things do not work out, he will still be young enough to marry someone else and have children. Perhaps by that time he will have gotten over his love for me, who knows? You see, I haven't as much to lose as he.

Another thing, Miss Haworth—if it is advisable that I marry him, is there any place where a license can be obtained where age does not have to be mentioned? Or if I make a false statement in that respect would it make the marriage illegal? Will you please advise me soon through your column, as the answers to these questions are of great importance to me, and will be anxiously awaited. (We have discussed the matter of not having children, and he is willing to marry me, even so.) Yours truly,

IRENE R.

Things to Consider

DEAR IRENE R.: If, as and when a woman of 39 marries (for love) a man 13 years her junior, I think she should enter into the bargain with the clear understanding that there is more than a chance that she is seizing present happiness at the cost of future pain. One cannot be so naive as to predict smooth sailing for her. She is starting (what is always, at best) a hazardous adventure with the odds heavily stacked against her.

Whether she sees the thing through to overtly satisfactory conclusions (that is to say, remains the man's wife until death dissolves the union) depends on what cards she holds, how brilliantly she plays them, and how philosophically she can adjust herself to a continually challenging situation. And also, of course, upon the man's personality, temperament and anticipations—on what he is conditioned to need, to accept, and to be contented with, in the marital relationship.

Looking on the brighter or more hopeful side of the picture, one might say that when a young man is deeply attracted—with matrimonial intent—to an older woman, it does not necessarily mean that the latter has qualities of youthfulness which enable her to compete with much younger girls on a basis of equality. It may mean that age has invested the woman with qualities which younger girls do not as yet possess, and which qualities in themselves exert a more potent appeal to the man than the casual, carefree charms of his feminine contemporaries.

It is sometimes held that the younger man who loves an older woman is psychologically immature, and seeking a sense of security through emotional affiliation with a mature, protective personality, who will be to him as much parent as mate. But it is also held—and who can disprove it?—that some persons are "old souls" almost from the cradle upwards, in the sense that—intellectually, spiritually and socially—they put away "childish things" very early in life, and bring to all their relationships a mature comprehension and attitude which can only find complementary response from persons who are their seniors by several or many years.

Before one could venture to predict the chances for happiness of a given union, where the woman is between 10 and 15 years older than the man, one would need to know far more about the nature of the respective individuals than is told here. If they are co-equal mentally and psychologically, or if each is temperamentally so constituted as to seem a natural complement to the other—in the subjective realms of personality—then the overt difference in ages may be reckoned as a minor handicap, constituting no formidable threat to enduring happiness.

In the final analysis, only the two persons involved are really qualified to say whether the union seems advisable or inadvisable, all things considered. For each may truly say to the world, in the words of the poetess, Laurence Hope: "No one but God and I knows what is in my heart." And as I heard a venerable scholar, philosopher and author say the other evening: "What the human soul pants after is not fame, not wealth, not ease nor privilege, but opportunity for expressing itself in deeply, personally satisfying ways." Thus, if and when two persons—man and woman—who have reached the age which makes for rational understanding of life and of themselves, are profoundly convinced that together they could find more contentment than they ever could apart, I think they might be amply justified in flying in the face of that conventional precedent which holds it unseemly for a wife to be older than her husband.

Incidentally, your present age need not deter you from having children. Many women become mothers, for the first time, after the age of 40. What's more, some of the happiest family groups are those which embrace children-by-adoption. Also, children would provide an invaluable interest in common—providing they are mutually desired. And the role of motherhood, for a woman nearing middle life, may be very rejuvenating — physically, psychologically and socially—giving her a new bloom and a program of activity that is calculated to prolong her youthful outlook indefinitely.

About the marriage license: Your marriage would not be invalidated supposing you were to give false information concerning your age. As a matter of fact, keepers of such records are philosophically reconciled to the theory that few women, indeed, ever list their actual age when applying for a license to wed. When approaching your age, brides-to-be usually give themselves the benefit of a subtraction ranging anywhere from 5 to 10 years.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

New York, April 24.

AS AUNTIE Mae West said not long ago—and a cruel crack it was—"I hear most of the fair is going to be along Broadway, anyhow." That's a Westian exaggeration, for no one can snicker off the big show out Flushing way. However, Broadway has some right worthy peep-shows now on view—and it got a red-hot addition a few nights ago when Katharine Cornell opened up the new comedy, "No Time for Comedy," by Sam Behrman, author of many a hit.

ALICE HUGHES

It was Kit's finest New York bow in two years—far too long an absence—and her only essay at a comedy role, save "Candida," in longer than that. And Candy is far from comic. Looking fine, with her art deft and sure, the Cornell triumphed on her first night, and it seems certain that a fine star in a good play will brighten the Broadway night for many a month to come—unless the heat douses both.

Theater-devotees are divided into two camps—"The Cornell Brigade" and the "Helen Hayes Loyal Legion." Each believes its pet is the authentic First Lady of the American stage. Ah well, glory enough for both, I say, though I must admit that to me the work of the little Hayes girl is sheer magic. But now it is our Kit's turn, and she is glorying in it and making thousands happy by her presence. Helen is reveling in her first real vacation since "Victoric Regina" began its triumphs some years back. She rates it, that baby!

But the burden does not rest on Kapable Katie alone. There's that other Kate, the Hepburn of Hartford, making critics and public eat their nasty words with her luminous performance in "The Philadelphia Story." Never sell this freckle-faced girl short. She's a magnificent natural actress, and gets better all the time. Add to this pair the lovely work of Judith Anderson in "Family Portrait"—and we're all lucky in having three glorious actresses of varying types busy among us at once. Yes, don't overlook the theater, here.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: My favorite club had its annual ball and party the other night. I mean the Ziegfeld Club, made up of lovely ladies once glorified by Flo in his famous "Follies." Proceeds go to needier alumnae of those matchless girl shows. It was a fine shindig. Frank Fay, that rascal, mastered the ceremonies, and all Broadway's best appeared.

And the former "Follies" queens, who once were to New York what the famous models and mannequins now are, looked lovely after the passage of a good many years. Most of them are wives and even mammas, now.

I SAW MARY MARTIN, whose heart still belongs to Daddy, at the Coq Rouge Club, looking mighty pert and purty in a dark green bengaline suit, with a peplum jacket and a shell pink net blouse. Rumors still persist that handsome Winthrop Rockefeller's heart belongs to Mary—but shucks, this is gossip. They do dance together just too sweet, and seem to like each other fine.

Simplest Teas Create an Air of Ease, Friendliness

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

THE INFORMAL afternoon tea has the charm of easy hospitality. The simplest of teas, assembled on the tea table, or even on a tray, creates an atmosphere of ease and friendliness. A generous plate of bread and butter in any of its many delicious forms, with a cup of steaming hot tea, makes a very satisfying tea menu.

Informal Tea Sandwiches

Remove crusts from bread. Slice as thin as possible, about ⅛-inch thick. Spread with softened butter before slicing. Cut in triangles, strips, squares, circles or any special shapes easy to cut. Fill with such simple fillings as:

Cucumber and Cream Cheese: Chop cucumbers and mix with softened cream cheese. Spread buttered bread lightly with mayonnaise. Lay a few frills of lettuce on it. Spread other side of sandwich with cucumber and cheese mixture and put together.

Olive and Nut: Chop stuffed olives and nuts fine; moisten with mayonnaise, or mix the chopped olives and nuts with cream cheese.

Mushroom: Chop fresh or canned mushrooms very fine. Panfry in butter, with a very little chopped green pepper and a hint of onion. Add just enough flour to take up the butter. When the mushrooms begin to brown, add a tablespoon or two of cream. Cool before spreading.

Tea for the Timid

LONG an avowed enemy of the "large tea," Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, founder and president of the Do Something About It League, yesterday renewed her assault on this institution.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"I am undertaking this campaign on behalf of some of my more timid friends," announced the famous reformer. "Personally, I am able to hold my own at these events, especially since upon my return from England last fall I took up the use of the hunting stick. Now I go freely to teas unaccompanied, and if I am ignored, I simply set up my hunting stick, sit down and draw a book out of my handbag. However, I have many less aggressive friends who tell me they still suffer great embarrassment at these events."

"What about the tea reforms you have already started, Mrs. DeGoofey?" inquired a reporter.

"They are going along—slowly. But, as you may remember, they were mostly devoted to the mechanics of the tea. Now I propose to do something about the psychological end."

Mrs. Genteel Gets Snubbed

"You mean you will have mental tests for those who attend?" asked a political writer.

"No, I will not go to that extreme—yet. All I hope to do now is to aid the lone wolves and the obscure guests at teas. Now I have a friend who had a most distressing experience recently. I tell you, she is Julia Genteel—you know, Mrs. George Genteel, but don't put that in the paper. Well, anyway, on a certain occasion she had met and had a long talk with a prominent hostess of this city. Later she received an invitation to tea at this woman's house.

"Now on arriving, she found herself in a crush resembling that at a county fair. She finally made her way to the hostess expecting to be greeted cordially. But what did she meet? A glazed stare, a frozen smirk. There was not a glimmer of recognition in the hostess' face as she perfunctorily shook my friend's hand and passed her on to the wolves.

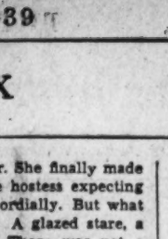
"Not sighting a familiar face, there was nothing for my poor friend to do but join the charge on the food. She prolonged her eating hoping someone would give her a kind word. No one did. Even the waiters seemed to regard her suspiciously. She decided to go home, then remembered she would have to pass the doorman. Seeing her leave so soon, what would he think? That she had just come for food? Or that she was a gate crasher, or a foreign spy?

Tea Hound Patty To the Aid

"Well, finally she fled and came to me with her tale. My subsequent investigation has shown that literally hundreds of persons have had the same experience."

"What do you intend to do about it, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"First, I will make it obligatory that every hostess take a course in memory training before being licensed to give a tea.



Patty Popinjay

"Patty Popinjay!" chorused the press representatives.

"Yes, Patty Popinjay is a cousin of Charlie McCarthy. The Do Something About It League is presenting her to each person who enrolls in its special abridged course in ventriloquism. Patty, it is needless to say, is a young woman who is going places. She is smart, fashionable and socially aggressive—just the type of successful tea hound you delight in as a companion.

"Now then suppose you are a quiet, well-bred person like my friend Julia Genteel. You take Patty with you to a tea. If those around you turn their backs on you, you can engage in a conversation with Patty. Or if you are not making any progress toward the refreshments, Patty can be depended upon to keep saying 'Excuse me,' 'May I get through, please?' meanwhile elbowing and shoving ruthlessly toward the ribbon sandwiches.

"Finally, if you find yourself stuck with an unimportant person or persons and long to join a more advantageous group, Patty will exclaim, 'Oh, I see my old friend Mrs. Pence Bigwig over there! I must go and speak to her!' You see, the possibilities are endless."

"Mrs. DeGoofey, will you yourself go around with Patty Popinjay?" ventured a reporter.

"Well, no, not unless I should go into politics?"

"Are you contemplating such a thing?"

"We—ll, some of my friends are urging me to. I may have a statement later."

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Exercise Is Best Remedy for Spring Fever; Badminton, Golf, Riding, Rope Skipping Good

AS FAR AS we are concerned, spring fever is the most unmistakable sign that spring has come. Grandma had a cure for it, a sturdy mixture of sulphur and molasses with which she perennially dosed the entire clan, herself excepted. She never had spring fever, not even a touch of it, for she was too active.

And now that the scientists have taken this foible of the human race seriously, they agree that more activity is what we all need. Their explanation of spring fever is: The natural reaction to excessive business activity and lack of sunlight during the winter. And their recommendations are that we take more exercise in the fresh air and adopt a lighter diet.

Spring Toning Needed

Without meaning to, they've almost mapped out a figure program for you! You may have been following the light diet to take off weight, but it is very unlikely that you have been getting anything like enough outdoor activity. You've gone soft, and it's a spring toning you need, not a tonic.

If you like sports, you can get all the exercise you need in tennis, badminton, golf, fishing and horseback riding. That's the way the movie beauties keep trim, and their streamlined figures are the despair of a good percentage of the average women.

But you may not be particularly good at games and not interested in learning. In that case, your spring tone-up may take the form of gardening, which is not to be classed as a sissy recreation. You can get a real workout for the arm, shoulder and trunk muscles in digging, pulling the weeds or mowing the lawn. One reducer took 3 inches off her waistline simply by working for a little while every day in her back yard garden plot, and that's a good job of pruning for anybody's figure.

Try Skipping Rope

If you are lucky enough to have a back yard, slip into your slacks every day and do your special exercises out there. You can skip rope, toss a medicine ball or rig up a badminton net and take on the kids. Exercise can be fun—it's certainly a lot easier to take than sulphur and molasses—and if you will use your ingenuity you can turn this springtime hardening-up into an enjoyable recreation.

Society Pleased as Britain Names Bachelor Lord Lothian as Envoy

Appointment of Sir Ronald Lindsay's Successor Takes Capital by Surprise; Embassy Invitations Major Teacup Topic

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

WHEN A FREQUENTLY RUMORED change in diplomatic circles becomes a fact, Washington society always is surprised. Thus, when the report rippled around the Capital yesterday that Sir Ronald Lindsay's successor had been announced, and that the current British Ambassador would retire shortly after the forthcoming visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, nobody was disposed to believe it.

But now its all down in black and white that the Marquess of Lothian (Phillip Henry Kerr) has been named, I have an idea that Sir Ronald and Lady Lindsay must be not only relieved that the next British Ambassador has been chosen but also no end amused that he is one of the few eligible diplomats not reportde before as being headed here. Incidentally, the appointment adds another to the local list of bachelor diplomats (and a bachelor, whether a diplomat or not, always is welcome in Washington society, where women outnumber the men two to one).

A couple of years ago when rumors flourished on all sides that the current ambassador would retire at almost any minute, Lady Lindsay told a reporter that Sir Ronald would be here until the spring of 1939, at least, and that none thus far mentioned widely in the press as his successor would be named. From hten until now, the rumors have continued, and virtually every British notable from Sir Robert Vansittart and Anthony Eden to the Duke of Windsor has been suggested over the teacups as the next ambassador.

Meanwhile, Sir Ronald and Lady Lindsay have gone quietly about their business, and recently their business—preparations for the visit of Great Britain's King and Queen—has been enough to occupy both of them and their staff, as well as a sizeable section of the State Department. With two parties scheduled at the British Embassy during the two-day visit of the King and Queen, preparations have been under way for months until now, no doubt, the dinner and the garden party at which their Majesties are to entertain at the Embassy have been worked out down to finest detail.

Invitations Eagerly Sought

For years, garden parties at the British Embassy have been the talk of the town. Capital dowagers and debutantes, cave dwellers and newcomers have left cards at the Georgian mansion on Massachusetts avenue season after season with the hope that they would be invited to one ofthe two garden parties that run away with the social spotlight each spring.

High-powered prestige has long been attached by social Washington to an invitation from his majesty's embassy but probably never so much as now when a king and queen will be hosts at two parties there. "I'd give a thousand dollars to get to the dinner," said an amazingly frank woman at a tea party the other day, "but perhaps the garden party will be almost as thrilling." Had she already received her invitation to the latter? she was asked. "No, but I've gone each spring for years," she said, "and surely they won't let me down now."

Garden Party Is 'Promising' Event

Many a Washingtonian is pinning her social hopes on that party. A red-letter ocasion on many accounts, it probably will be the one function on the royal calendar to which some guests will be invited without reference to protocol; but none yet knows how big the garden party will be or how inclusive. The whole thing rests now in Lady Lindsay's very capable hands; and while Potomac Park wouldn't be large enough to accommodate all those who may be hoping to be invited to the garden party, chances are, the company will represent the cream of Washington's official and residential society.

SOCIETY - GO - ROUND: Col. and Mrs. George Tayloe Langhorne, of Chicago, have arrived in Washington and are at the Shoreham for several days. Mrs. Langhorne is the former Mary Waller. Col. Langhorne is the brother of Mrs. Powell Clayton and Marshall Langhorne, of Washington. The latter will fete the visitors at a dinner tomorrow evening . . . Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney will entertain at dinner Saturday night . . . Baron von Spiegel, German Consul General in New Orleans, will arrive today at the Mayflower for a brief sojourn . . . Clarence Hewes will be host at dinner this evening . . . Lady Malcolm and her son, Angus Malcolm, Second Secretary of the British Embassy, have invitations out for a dinner on May 3 . . . Representative and Mrs. William D. Byron will entertain at dinner on May 10 . . . Senator James M. Slattery, of Illinois who arrived in Washington yesterday to take his oath of office, is staying at the Mayflower. Mrs. Slattery will poin him later.

Comdr. and Mrs. Braine Move to New Home

Commander and Mrs. Clinton E. Braine have moved from 4514 Connecticut avenue to the home they have purchased at 32 Kensington Parkway, Rock Creek Hills

Mrs. Braine is planning a series of parties to be given some time next month in her new resiednce.

Gives Dinner

V. A. L. Mallet, Counselor of the British Embassy, entertained at dinner last evening at his home on Massachusetts avenue.

On 'Camera Stroll'

The doyenne of the diplomatic corps, Lady Lindsay, has two hobbies, gardening and photography. Here she is taking a candid camera stroll through her gardens, which will be the scene of one of the most important events on the spring social schedule—the garden party given by Thier Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth, on June 8

Cocktail Party HonorsGrangers

Maj. W. P. T. Hill, of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Hill entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon in honor of their house guests, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Granger, of New York, who arrived earlier in the day. The event, which was attended by 30 guests, followed the afternoon parade in the Marine Barracks quadrangle.

Dr. Granger, who is connected with the American Museum of Natural History in New York, came especially for the meeting of the Explorers' Club last night when he made the principal address. Dr. Granger was well prepared to deliver such an address as he has accompanied Roy Chapman Andrews on many of his explorations.

Lieut. Col. Chramiec And Wife Entertain At Dinner Party

The Military and Air Attache of the Polish Embassy, Lieut. Col. Andrzej Chramiec and Mme. Chramiec, entertained at a small dinner last evening in their home at 3005 Thirty-fourth street.

Their guests included Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries and his daughters, Mrs. Frederic Henney and Miss Carol Fries; Mme. Witold Wonkowicz, wife of the Counselor of the Polish Embassy, and her sister-in-law, Mme. de Romer; Michael Budny, who has recently been promoted to second secretary of the Polish Embassy; Edward Weintal and Jan de Rosen, famous muralist, who is now working on a mural for the Washington Cathedral.

Mme. Chramiec will entertain at tea tomorrow from 4 to 6 o'clock. She will leave on May 5 for a trip to Poland, and Col. Chramiec expects to join her there this summer, leaving Washington about June 8.

Mr. Vanderbilt King's Reporter

Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., who is at the Shoreham Hotel for several days, has been assigned by a national magazine to accompany Great Britain's King and Queen from the time they arrive in Canada until they sail for their homeland. He will join them May 12 and follow them on their tour of both Canada and the United States.

Mr. Vanderbilt covered the Coronation for a magazine and has written much about noted Britishers.

Mr. Vanderbilt and King George were students together at the Priory in Malvern, England, and both attended at the same time a preparatory camp in Salisbury Plains, similar to the R. O. T. C. in the United States.

Rachel Crothers To Receive Award

Rachel Crothers, noted playwright, will arrive in Washington this afternoon to be a guest at the White House, where this evening she will receive the National Achievement Award of Chi Omega Sorority.

Another notable scheduled to visit the White House today is Cornelia Van A. Chapin, noted sculptor, who is coming as an emissary of the Sculptors Guild to ask Mrs. Roosevelt to set a date when she can visit the Sculptors Guild outdoor exhibition at Park avenue and Thirty-ninth street. Mrs. Roosevelt is an honorary sponsor of the exhibition.

Miss Chapin, who will also attend the reception at the White House this evening, will arrive from New York this afternoon and will stay at the Hotel Lafayette during her Washington visit.

Mrs. Gudger Gives Her Final 'At Home'

Busy Hostess Splits Time Between Packing And Club Activities

Life these days is just one list-checking after another for Mrs. Emmet C. Gudger, wife of Capt. Gudger, who launched a debutante daughter last winter, and now is dividing her time between packing household effects, preparatory to moving from Washington, and selling tickets for the annual spring fete of the Democratic Club.

The daughter of the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Mrs. Gudger always has been one of the Capital's most active hostesses; and now with final plans made for Capt. Gudger's transfer to Honolulu, she is busier than ever. At her "at home" yesterday, she said packing was progressing as well as could be expected, and that the furniture and clothes of the Gudger household would be on the way West in a few weeks.

According to present plans, Mrs. Gudger will leave for her ranch in Montana the latter part of next month, and Capt. Gudger and their younger daughter, Gloria, will drive out a few days later. Capt. Gudger will stop in Montana for a brief stay before going on to San Francisco, where he will sail June 22 for his new post. Meanwhile, Miss Elinor Gudger, their other daughter, who is completing her second year at Mount Holyoke College, has not definitely decided whether she will stay in the East and go job hunting or join her mother in Montana for the summer.

Yesterday's "at home," an informal affair and the final one at which Mrs. Gudger will be hostess before she leaves, drew a sizable number of the many friends of the Gudgers. Gloria, in a smart blue and white figured frock, assisted her mother, who was trimly turned out in a floor-length green print with satin sandals to match. Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes came in to assist the latter part of the afternoon. Among those stopping in were Capt. and Mrs. Ernest W. Brown, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Julian J. Levasseur, Miss Margaret Delano Gage, Mrs. Charles J. Kappler and her mother, Mrs. Theodore Shuey, of Staunton, Va., and Florida, who recently came to Washington for a visit after spending the winter in her home in Florida.

Mrs. Van Zandt Party Hostess

Mrs. J. Parker Van Zandt entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Madison Room at Wardman Park Hotel. The long table was decorated with spring flowers in pink and blue shades. The hostess wore a frock of beige crepe with dark brown accessories and a hat made of tiny rolls of shiny brown straw braid.

Guests included Mrs. George Grant Mason, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. Harold Moulton, Mrs. Edward T. Taylor, Mrs. Joaquin Elizalde, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, Mrs. Edward Keys, Mrs. Henry Berliner, Mrs. William B. Willard, Mrs. William Forbes, Miss Eleanor Bass, Mrs. Frank King, Mrs. Carl Casey, Miss Janet Richards, Mrs. William Allison, Mrs. William Deming, Mrs. Dell Yarnell, Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, Mrs. Edward B. Clark, Mrs. Adrian Busick, Mrs. Charles Hendley, Mrs. James Warren Adams, Mrs. Hamilton Wright and Mrs. Harry Franz.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Zandt will leave tomorrow for New York, where they will attend the opening of the World's Fair. On Thursday evening Mr. Van Zandt will deliver the James Jackson Cabot professorship lecture on European air transport at Norwich University.

Before returning to Washington Mrs. Van Zandt will visit her grandmother, Mrs. Archie M. Stevenson, and her mother, Mrs. Mary Stevenson Begole, at Laguna Beach, Calif.

Admiral Marquart, Wife Leave Today To Visit 2 Fairs

Rear Admiral and Mrs. John Marquart will leave today for Philadelphia to visit friends and then on to New York to see the World's Fair. From there they will go to Chicago on their way to visit Admiral Marquart's family in the Middle West.

They will proceed from there to San Francisco to see the fair there, and then go on to Pasadena, Calif., to visit Mrs. Marquart's family. They will be in southern California until the latter part of May, when they will sail for Honolulu for Admiral Marquart's new station with the Minecraft Squadron in Honolulu.

Ghiraldos Are Ordered To Guatemala in June

Harris & Ewing.

SENORA DE GHIRALDO

Counselor at Argentine Embassy Here to Take Attractive Wife and Son on Short Vacation; His New Post to Cover Five Nations

Washington will lose one of its most attractive diplomatic couples in June when Don Hector Ghiraldo, Counselor of the Argentine Embassy, will leave as a full-fledged Minister, with his wife for Guatemala.

Last month orders came through from the Argentine that Senor Ghiraldo would soon be transferred to another country as chief of mission; but his definite assignment was not given.

Now plans have been completed for him to represent the Argentine in not only one country but five. He and Senora de Ghiraldo will make their home in Guatemala City, but his work as Minister will also cover Nicaragua, Honduras, El Salvador, and Costa Rica as well as Gautemala.

The Ghiraldos, who came to Washington a little more than two years ago, have made quite a place for themselves in Washington society. Senora de Ghiraldo, who was born in Buenos Aires, is half French and has spent much of her life in Paris. Three years ago she became a bride in Buenos Aires, where her parents now live, and it was not long after that when she and her husband came to Washington. Senor Ghiraldo, who has held posts in Stockholm, Lisbon and Buenos Aires, was a member of the Chaco Boundary Commission and later the Pan-American Peace Conference which President Roosevelt attended. Handsome, able and affable, he has made an extensive circle of friends since he has been in Washington.

According to present plans, the Ghiraldos and their young son, Don Hector, jr., will make "a little trip for vacation" as Senora de Ghiraldo expresses it, before they start to Central America. They will also stop in New York to see the fair. Incidentally, Senora Ghiraldo, who is one of the prettiest hostesses in the diplomatic corps, speaks five languages fluently.

Luncheon Today For Dr. Carlson

Dr. Anton J. Carlson, professor of physiology at the University of Chicago, will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given today by Dr. Errett C. Albritton at the Cosmos Club. The function will take place at 12:30 o'clock, following the lecture that Dr. Carlson is to deliver this morning at the George Washington University School of Medicine.

Rodman-Steiner Troth Revealed

Washington friends of Richard Lewis Steiner, of the United States Housing Authority, have learned of his engagement to Miss Jane Seaton Rodman, daughter of Mrs. Seaton Rodman, of Richfield Springs, N. Y. The announcement of the betrothal was made Sunday afternoon at a tea given in the King's Crown Hotel in New York City.

Mr. Steiner, who has made his home in Washington for some time, is the son of the late Dr. and Mrs. Bernard C. Steiner. He prepared at the Choate School in Wallingford, Conn., was graduated from the Yale Engineering School, and received his master's degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The bride-elect studied at the Horace Mann School and was graduated from Simmons College in Boston and the Lowthrope School of Landscape Architecture in Groton, Mass. She is now a student at the Graduate School of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Diplomats To See Movie Premiere

Latin-American Party Goes to New York to Attend 'Juarez'

A large contingent of diplomats from Mexico, and the countries of Central and South America will leave by special train this afternoon at 3 o'clock for New York, where they will be guests at the premiere, tonight of the motion picture, "Juarez," which depicts the life of Benito Juarez, who freed Mexico from European imperialism.

Juarez was the Mexican president when the French Emperor Napoleon III sent Maximilian across the ocean as Emperor of Mexico. And it was Juarez who led the fight until Maximilian was slain and the troops withdrawn from Mexico.

No amount of military strength will act as a restraining influence on a foreign country if it believes we have not the backbone to use it, Brig. Gen. W. P. Upshur, U. S. M. C., told the United Daughters of 1812 last night at the first evening session of the three-day meeting of the Associate Council of the Willard Hotel.

"With material preparedness, we must have mental or moral preparedness, and be willing to use these instruments of war in case we have to," said Gen. pshur.

He cited the War of 1812 as an example of unpreparedness and pointed out it was not until 1814, when Gen. Winfield Scott led his men to victory, that the tide turned.

The War of 1812 was further discussed by Dr. J. T. Walker, professor of history and government at the College of William and Mary. Col. Frederick Gilbert Bauer, president general of the General Society, War of 1812, also was a speaker on the program at which Mrs. Arthur J. O'Neill, national president, presided.

Resolutions Favor Barred Doors

Resolutions drafted yesterday by the resolutions committee, of whichc Mrs. Perry Heath, of Ohio, is chairman, would close all immigration for at least five years or until the unemployment and relief problems of this country have been solved; would oppose the Wagner-Rogers bill to admit 20,000 refugee children from Germany to this country within the next two years; prevent aliens from holding Government positions; provide indorsement of the bill of Representative Smith, of Virginia, to require licensing of civilian military organizations and require fingerprinting of all aliens. The committee will present its recommendations tomorrow.

Tonight Representative Byrns will speak at the annual banquet, substituting for Representative Dies, who is ill and unable to be present. Also on the program will be John Clagget Proctor, who will talk on "Washington, the Capital, in the War of 1812."

National Officers Hold Reception

In the afternoon Mrs. O'Neill received with other national officers at a reception given in the national headquarters, 1461 Rhode Island avenue. With her were Miss Minnie Wade, of New York; Mrs. H. B. Diefenbach, of Akron, Ohio, and Mrs. A. Lee Smizer, of Warrensburg, Mo., vice presidents; Mrs. Lloyd Smith, of Michigan, recording secretary; Mrs. Maurice Blake, of New Jersey, treasurer; Mrs. Henry Warren, of Connecticut, historian; Mrs. P. F. Tilson, of Texas, curator; Mrs. William Porter, of Virginia, corresponding secretary; Miss Katherine Wootten, of the District, librarian; Mrs. Norris Harris, of Baltimore, registrar, and Mrs. Robert Johnston, of Iowa, honorary national president.

Pouring were Miss Florine Judik, of Baltimore, national secretary, and three State presidents, Mrs. Samuel Helfrich, of Maryland; Miss Charlotte Aycrigg, New York, and Mrs. A. J. Rasmussen, Nebraska.

Ramspeck Backs Merit System

With 20 per cent of the personal income of American citizens, represented in the national tax bill, it is reasonable that they should want to know how the money is spent, Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, told members of the business and Professional Women's Club last night. Addressing the club at its monthly dinner meeting, the Georgia Congressman contrasted the economy and efficiency of the merit system with the waste and inefficiency of the spoils system.

"It is obvious," he said, "that where people who create jobs also have authority to fill them, there is constant pressure for the creation of more jobs. Business people should take an interest in the method of selection not only of Federal employes but also those of local government."

He outlined the provisions of the bill he is sponsoring, designed to put State employes entrusted with the expenditure of Federal grants such as those for roads and social security, under a State merit system. This would eliminate fights such as went on last fall in some sections between State and Federal political machines, he said.

The dinner was in charge of the legislative committee, of which Mrs. Marion H. Britt is chairman.

Club Federation Opposes Site For Girls' School Outside D. C.

Indorses Municipally-Owned Liquor Stores Bill, Prohibition of Whisky Advertising on Radio and Abolition of Movie Block-Booking

The D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, meeting at the Roosevelt Hotel yesterday, opposed the purchase of land for and erection of a new National Training School for Girls outside of the District. It also passed a resolution requesting that these be included in the District appropriations for 1940 funds for purchase of a site and for plans and specifications for a suitable building for the Woman's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department and the House of Detention.

These and other resolutions on District questions were presented by Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, chairman of legisaltion, at the business meeting, preceding a program under the education department of the federation, of which Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins is charimna. Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel presided at the business session.

The federation indorsed and recommended a study of the bill introduced by Representative Harry Sheppard for a system of municipally owned liquor dispensaries; indorsed legislation to prohibit advertising of alcoholic beverages by radio; indorced the Neely bill to abolish compulsory block booking and blind selling of motion pictures, and voted to oppose thte Schulte bill, which would provide high license fees for chain stores.

Oppose Playground Transfer Plan

Mrs. Watkins appealed to members to urge appropriation of $30,000 for plans for a new teachers' college. Mrs. Howard called attention to the fact that the club was on record in opposition to the transfer of the Playground Department to the Board of Education, and also urged a study of the questions involved in the pending milk investigation.

The program was a series of skits showing the needs o fthe District in the various divisions covered by the department of education. There were also exhibits representing the work of students in vocational schools, conservation of national resources and other suchc projects.

The first skit portrayed the organization of the Departmept of Education. Mrs. Watkins, in cap and gown, presided. District problems were brought to the fore when Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass entered in colonial costume as "Mother District of Columbia" and presented them.

Chairmen Present Work of Committees

Mrs. William J. Peters, chairman of the committee on conservation of natural resources, introduced Mrs. Merle C. Kissinger, who described the national parks service, and Mrs. Ludo Pickett, who discussed stream pollution. Others on the program were Mrs. James H. Underwood, chairman of library service; Mrs. Elroy B. Bradley and Mrs. H. E. Rogers, of the committee on recreation; Mrs. W. L. Lasswell, adult education; Mrs. Yorick Mathes and her daughter, mothercraft.

Under the division of public instruction, Mrs. Walter B. Fry, chairman; Mrs. Walter P. Harman and Mrs. Henry E. Ewing, discussed education in institutions of higher learning, and Mrs. Charles Lane, vocational education.

Skits which followed showed the set-up on the Board of Education, as described in the report of the advisory committe, with the Commissioners' responsibilities canceling those of the board; the Griffenhager report, in which the school system was represented as a dummy scantily dressed in the few powers with which the report had clothed it, and the cutting of the school budget by the Commissioners, the budget committee and Congress.

Music was by a string quartet, Ann Pearson, Irish Parrish, Phyllis Alliey and Norma Coombs, with Frances Barrett at the piano.

University Women Display Handicraft

Members Illustrate How Work Was Done At Clubhouse Exhibit

Action in applied arts added interest to the exhibit sponsored by the applied arts section of the local branch of the American Association of University Women yesterday in the lounge of the clubhouse. In addition to showing articles of handicraft members were there to illustrate how the work was done.

Dr. Edith L. Allen, section chairman exhibited a hammered copper tray she had made after one evening's instruction, as well as handsome examples of needlepoint. Various kinds of needlework were demonstrated by Miss Helen White. Mrs. Warner McKenney demonstrated leather tooling and had examples of this as well as a needlepoint rug on display. Miss Isabel Grove also showed tooled leather and a woven scarf and bag, and Miss Lillian Phrimmer demonstrated weaving. Miss Mary Grindell gave a demonstration of metal work.

The exhibit also included models of a seahorse fountain and a sun dial, and two bas reliefs by Mrs. Harold N. Fowler, sculptor; paintings by Mrs. Howard Oldham, Miss Laura Pollock and Mrs. Louise Bauer and the manuscript of a new book, "National Parks of the Northwest" by one of the members, Mrs. Earl Trager. The hobby department included a collection of miniature dolls of all lands by Miss Grace Frysinger. Mrs. Waino Jukkola assisted Dr. Allen in arranging the show.

2 Numbers Players on New Warring Jury

Two men who admitted they had played the numbers game were among jurors sworn yesterday to try Emmitt Warring, jailed boss of a $2,000,000 a year lottery, a third time for criminal conspiracy.

The two were among 15 who stood up in open court and told Justice Laws they had been patrons of the racket, out of which Emmitt and his brothers are charged with making huge profits which went to bribe policemen but not to pay income taxes.

Locked Up for Safety

Five women and seven men were locked up in the Continental Hotel last night, under guard of four deputy United States marshals, to remain sequestered until they hand up their verdict on the indictment against the numbers baron. Also locked up were two men alternate jurors, who will hear the evidence and step into the box if something should happen to members of the regular jury.

Justice Laws explained to the jurors that they were sequestered to make certain that they reached their verdict without outside influence.

The first Warring jury disagreed. The second was discharged after revelation that Emmitt Warring had bribed Deputy United States Marshal John B. Upperman, who was in charge of both. Warring, Upperman, Juror Carl T. Denekas of the second trial and two go-betweens were jailed for the jury tampering.

Warring, now serving 26 months in Lorton reformatory, was well groomed and looked vigorous yesterday when he took his place beside Attorney F. Joseph Donohue, who is defending him.

Laws Handles Questioning

Justice Laws personally took charge of questioning 90 prospective jurors. Lawyers asked almost no questions. The justice told the veniremen that Warring was indicted for conspiring with his brothers—Leo Paul, 35, and Charles (Rags), 30, trigger man of the gang—and Gordon L. R. Sadur for plotting to hide the numbers gang income from income tax agents.

When there were less than 50 veniremen left, the justice asked:

"Has any of the members of the panel played at any time this numbers game? I do not feel any hesitancy at asking, because we must arrive at the facts in this matter."

Fifteen men rose.

"No one who is seated now has placed a bet in the numbers game?" Justice Laws pressed. There was no answer.

None Excused for Cause

All 15 said they did not feel that their adventures in the numbers racket would prevent them giving a fair trial to both Warring and the Government. None was excused for cause.

Two of the 15 eventually were seated as jurors. They were Robert L. Harper, 38, gas fitter, 418 Hamilton street northwest, and Randolph Bowie, 43, grocery store manager, 1610 Kenilworth avenue northwest.

The Government used nine of its ten peremptory challenges and Donohue used eight of his ten when Justice Laws finished his questioning. Pine and Wilson then were in a quandary. They wished to challenge Harper and Bowie. But the next two jurors on the list to be called were men more undesirable from the Government's viewpoint, because they had acknowledged acquaintance with the Warrings. Had Pine and Wilson used their one challenge they would have been unable to keep one, perhaps both, these men off the jury. Both men were challenged when called as alternates later.

Pine to Outline Case Today

Mrs. Ellen L. Ridgeway, 33, housewife, 6222 Georgia avenue northwest; John C. Weedon, 34, realty broker, 4655 Massachusetts avenue northwest; Mrs. Dorothy G. Schneider, 34, housewife, 1353 Iris street northwest; Bowie E. Huah Augusterfer, 59, salesman, 4422 New Hampshire avenue northwest; Mrs. Marian D. McQueen, 30, housewife, 4917 First street northwest; Mrs. Margaret C. Salkeld, 39, housewife, 3017 Cortland place northwest; Harper; Mrs. Viola G. Wenzel, 26, housewife, 1106 Queen street northeast; Walter A. Crist, 40, teller, 3133 Connecticut avenue; James W. S. Hardy, 46, department store employe, 3311 Twenty-second street northeast; Herbert H. Myers, 40, cosmetic salesman, 322 Allison street northwest.

Alternates were Edward N. Bessling, 44, railroad worker, 1345 Nineteenth street northwest, and Thomas E. Flaherty, 43, contractor, 5520 Fourth street northwest.

Sworn as jury marshals were Deputies Dan Haltigan, Robert Jernberg, Martin Finn and Mrs. Margaret Ferris.

Offices

President's reorganization program.

Chief variance with the South Carolinian's project was the proposed establishment of a new welfare or security agency, not contemplated in the Senate bill which would merge the entire works and relief set-up under a new public works unit. The President is understood to have diverted the CCC and the NYA from the grouping contemplated by Byrnes to the proposed new welfare agency after consultation with the Senator.

One Grouping in Doubt

The Byrnes bill also provided for the so-called "white collar" group of WPA relief workers, not engaged in construction activities. At a late hour yesterday it was said the President had not finally determined whether to care for this group under his proposed public works agency or under the new welfare consolidation.

Early Adjournment Blocked

Each plan submitted by the President will take effect in 60 days unless previously disapproved by both houses of Congress, under the 60-day lay-over provision of the recently-enacted reorganization bill. Disapproval by one house cannot stop the program, as Congress provided that only by concurrent resolution, adopted by both chambers, can the White House action be "vetoed."

Leaders said the decision to reorganize this year definitely spiked all plans for an early adjournment and meant Congress must remain in session "at least" two more months.

A second set of interdepartmental and intradepartmental shifts is expected to be recommended within the month, based on data systematically collected by the President from heads of existing agencies. Should Congress decide to act this year on such additional proposals, adjournment may be further delayed. Senate Majority Leader Barkley said he thought it likely later reorganization proposals may be allowed to go over until next session.

Strictly departmental mergers and transfers known to be under study include:

Consolidation into one unit of five Treasury Department law enforcement agencies—the Secret Service, the Narcotics Bureau, the Customs Bureau and the Alcohol Tax and Intelligence Units of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Transfer of the Bureau of Fisheries, the Biological Survey, the Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Bureau of Lighthouses to the Interior Department.

Merger of Navy Department shipbuilding activities, now conducted by the Bureaus of Construction and Repair, Ordnance and Engineering into a single Navy bureau.

Possible union of the National Labor Relations Board with the National Mediation Board and other labor conciliation activities.

Follow-Up Action Likely

While the President's projected new public works and welfare setups would displace the integrated program outlined by Byrnes, it was expected the latter's measure will be revised to implement and give force to the plan.

Many of the agencies to be embraced in the reorganization plan will pass their statutory expiration dates within the year. The reorganization bill denied the President power to extend the life of an agency. Legislation will be necessary for that purpose. In addition, the President's plan can provide no formula for distribution of funds, a basic feature of the Byrnes bill.

Follow-up legislation therefore is expected by the South Carolinian, to provide that States and localities must put up a third of the cost of all works projects and that 100 per cent Federal relief projects be discontinued. Further effort is expected to enact a formula to provide that one-half of the funds allotted to a State be in a ratio to the unemployment in that State in relation to all other States, and one-half proportioned on the ratio of that State's population as compared with all other States.

G. O. P. Amendment Ready

Believing the Byrnes bill would be considered by the Senate yesterday, Senate Republicans, led by Senators Vandenberg, of Michigan, Taft, of Ohio, and Barbour, of New Jersey, had prepared an amendment to the measure to call for Federal work relief grants to the States, but with State supervision and responsibility for relief.

The Vandenberg-Taft-Barbour amendment would discontinue the present direct and work relief set-up as of January 1 and authorize $600,000,000 for grants to States with approved work relief programs in the six months, January 1 to June 30, 1940.

Under the Republican formula, the Federal Government would supply two-thirds of the total amount spent by States on direct and work relief. It would specify that 80 per cent of the funds spent for work relief must be devoted to wages.

As opposed to the Byrnes formula, the Republican amendment would base allotments to States one-third on the ratio of population, one-third on ratio of unemployment and one-third on the ratio of prevailing wage scales to those of other States.

Lowly Gourds Find Champion In Garden Expert

Virginia Beach, Va., April 24 (AP).—Gourds—the lowly plants which got a good play in the Bible but have been more or less overlooked since—will bask in the limelight here Thursday.

Garden makers recently got wise to themselves that they were missing a good bet in the matter of gourds, because it turns out that the little tricks do all right for themselves as added ornaments in anybody's garden. And so:

The merits of gourds will be discussed at some length by Helen M. Tillinghast, who'll journey all the way from Vernon, Conn., to tell the seventh convention of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs all about them.

Convention sessions will continue through Friday morning.

Doris Duke's Mate Slated For Senate

Judges

the wage and hour division, Labor Department, to be a judge of the First Circuit Court of Appeals, and nominated Walter A. Huxman, former Governor of Kansas, as Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals judge.

A native of Annapolis, Md., Magruder helped draw the Wagner labor relations act and for a time served as general counsel of the Labor Board. After graduating from St. John's College and the Harvard Law School, he served as secretary to the late Justice Brandeis of the Supreme Court. For a brief period following the war he was attorney for the United States Shipping Board. His work on the labor relations law was in collaboration with the late Representative Connery (Democrat), of Massachusetts, coauthor of the law.

Huxman, elected Governor when the Democrats swept Kansas in 1936, was defeated in a try for re-election last fall by Payne Ratner, Republican.

Magruder succeeds Judge George H. Bingham as a member of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Firs Circuit, which includes the judicial districts of Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Puerto Rico. Huxman succeeds Judge Robert Lee Williams on the Circuit Court in the Tenth Circuit, which includes a number of Plains States. Bingham and Williams retired recently.

Magruder, law professor at the Harvard Law School and vice dean since 1930, was one of Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter's ace students when Frankfurter was law professor at Harvard.

He is 45 years old. Huxman is 52.

Cromwell, 42-year-old 6-footer and author of the book, "In Defense of Capitalism," lives with his $30,000,000 Duke tobacco heiress, on the 3,000-acre Duke estate in Somerville, N. J. Two years ago he was boomed to succeed former Senator Moore, but nothing came of it.

Both in his book and in a pamphlet on "Sound Money" he challenged much in the present economic system but argued it can be made to work, that the profit system is sound and its difficulties lie in failure to understand certain dynamic and functional aspects of money.

Liberal and Wealthy

Before the Senate Agriculture Committee two years ago he explained his plan of "negative interest" under which the Government would give between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 a year to commercial banks for interest which industrial borrowers cannot pay on their loans. This, he contended, would encourage business to borrow money and thereby create jobs and more business activity.

Early last year, Cromwell told the House Banking Committee the flow of dollars should be synchronized with the flow of finished consumer goods. He recommended the Federal Reserve Board be directed not only to increase the flow of dollars as required by increases in the movement of consumer goods, but "to offset as well any hoarding that might take place."

As for his athletic prowess, he once demonstrated it by staying three rounds with Tommy Loughran, boxer. Son of Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, of Philadelphia, he is in line for a fortune in his own right.

"He is liberal in his views, has ideas about government, and what's more he has the wherewithal with which to fight for them," one Senator commented last night.

Perhaps he changes his mind and decides to cross Fifteenth street at an island midway between the southwest corner of Fifteenth and Maryland avenue. But there is no light at all for the pedestrian to follow in this direction.

Again the walker tries another move. He sees a faded crosswalk leading from the southeast curb to another island where Benning and Bladensburg roads come together. No light this way either.

No matter which way the pedestrian turns, he finds vehicular traffic on the move. There is no possible way for the walker to obey the city's new "pedestrian protection" rules and his only way to complete a crossing is to watch his chances in a lull and sprint. Or he might carry red flags on a box labeled "explosives."

Samuel Gompers Begins 53d Year In U. S. Service

Samuel Gompers, son of the late labor leader and chief clerk of the United States Labor Department, yesterday began his fifty-third year of service with the observation that "the Government is a mighty good employer."

Gompers declined to use the anniversary as occasion for any statements about labor or the civil service.

Gompers entered Federal service in the Government Printing Office April 23, 1887, and served there 20 years. He was transferred to the Department of Commerce and Labor and remained in the Labor Department when it was split off from Commerce.

Lopez Invited To Tell of Plan for Pan-America Song

Vincent Lopez, swing master, has been invited by Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, to present details of his plan for a contest to obtain "an appropriate hymn expressing the solidarity of the Americas," it was learned yesterday.

Under Lopez's proposal national contests would be held in each of the 21 American republics and in each country a jury of five men of a recognized musical ability and knowledge would choose the outstanding selections.

The 21 winning compositions, it was explained, will be played before three musical jurors from each country, and the hymn polling the largest vote will be adjudged the official Pan-American hymn.

Gov. O'Conor Asked to Kill Ripper Bill

Executive Warned Ouster of Jones Would Imperil Merit System

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 24.—Gov. O'Conor was warned today by Walter H. Buck, father of the Maryland civil service law, that approval of the Jones "ripper" bill would oust "the best employment commissioner Maryland ever has had."

Buck's statements were the feature of the opening of O'Conor's executive hearings on legislation awaiting his signature which successively saw slot machines, State board of education and motor vehicle testing laws take the spotlight.

Buck, director of the National Civil Service Reform League, declared the executive's signature to the bill which would replace State Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones with a commission would "shock the whole State, and destroy the morale of the merit system."

The Governor sought to get Buck to commit himself as to his preference for a three-man employment commission as proposed in the new bill, or the present one-man commission. Argument on that point, Buck said, would "be like trying to decide which came first, the chicken or the egg."

"The practical matter that faces you now," he told the Governor, "is whether you will take a backward step and tamper with a system which has functioned splendidly for 18 years.

"Mr. Jones has technical qualifications and the ability to firmly administer the merit system.

"I've been interested in the merit system since its inception, and I say he is the best commissioner we ever had and it would be a mistake to oust him."

Buck said he had been offered the commissioner's post by Gov. Ritchie, and helped draft the present Baltimore City merit system law, and he completely approved of Jones' administration.

"There's been no adequate study of the proposed change," Buck continued. "Actually there has been no reasons advanced for changing the system which has earned the approbation of the whole State."

He quoted the Governor's own Bowman commission report as an argument against approving the "ripper" bill.

"Let me read from the Bowman report," Buck said, quoting:

"'Departments should be headed by an individual unless there is a most compelling reason for the employment of a board.'"

Delegations this morning urged the Governor to veto the fair trade act amendment which would include retail gasoline dealers in the provisions of the price-fixing law. They maintained that the present law was adequate.

A Prince Georges County delegation asked sproval of slot machines.

"Wouldn't the legalization of slot machines be a violation of the Democratic platform expressly drawn against pinball and slot machines?" O'Conor asked T. E. Jones, a delegate in the Assembly.

Jones replied that he felt local sentiment should prevail. Dr. Harry M. Bowen, county commissioner and the only opponent to appear against the slot machine bill, said the machines would have a bad effect on the morals of children.

Dr. David E. Weglein, Baltimore superintendent of schools, and Forrest Bramble, president of the board of school commissioners, appeared to protest the bill providing the appointment of one member of the State board of education from each judicial district.

Such a measure, they said, would be a backward step, because education requires the services of the best men available, regardless of where they live in the State.

George E. Kneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club, asked the Governor to veto a bill setting up State motor vehicle testing stations, which he said was an "unwarranted grab of $225,000" from already overtaxed motorists.

O'Conor held hearings on a total of 23 measures, most of which were local in character. Not until 6:45 did he close the hearings, and announce that persons unheard today would be given an opportunity to speak tomorrow.

1,500-Pound Safe Stolen by Yeggs At Warrenton

Warrenton, Va., April 24 (AP).—Sheriff W. S. Woolf of Fauquier County said a 1,500-pound safe containing between $300 and $500 in cash was stolen last night from the office of the Remington Milling Co.

Sheriff Woolf said tracks indicated a truck was used to haul the safe away from the office. It was the second robbery of the company within two months.

Va. Auto Inspection To Commence May 1

Richmond, Va., April 24, (AP).—The State Division of Motor Vehicles said today every motor vehicle in the State would have to be inspected during the month of May. The semi-annual inspection will begin May 1.

"We cannot expect to have safety on our streets and highways," division officials said, "unless we give our drivers safe vehicles. That is the sole reason for this semi-annual inspection—to make sure that your vehicle is safe and that the vehicle you are meeting is safe also."

It Takes More Than 2 Cars To Keep James Duhamel Down

JAMES F. DUHAMEL

Badly Injured Twice by Autos, Oldest Active Patent Lawyer in D. C., 81, Still Walks 5 Miles To Office, Hikes 8 to 10 Hours in the Park

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

In a sense, life began for James F. Duhamel when he was 76. That is another way of saying he was all but killed when struck by an auto, only to make a splendid recovery. He was off his feet for many weeks, but just as soon as he was able to take solid food he was back at his patent law practice in the Munsey Building, as industrious as ever.

Then one day last December it happened again. Crossing Fourteenth and Upshur streets, he was clipped by another car and his hip severely injured. Two more months in bed. But Washington's oldest active patent attorney does not give up and today:

"I never felt better in my life," he says. He will be 81 in August.

When the weather is right, he walks to his office from his home, 4105 Eighteenth street northwest, a good five miles. Just last Sunday he hiked four hours through Rock Creek Park. Some days he takes nature strolls of eight to ten hours.

A native of Washington, one whose family has lived in this region for more than 250 years, Mr. Duhamel is not only a hard-working lawyer and an ardent hobbyist, but an aggressive participant in civic affairs. He is a member of the First Ward and Piney Branch Citizens associations, Association of Oldest Inhabitants, Society of Natives and delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Rather ironically, in view of his experiences as a pedestrian, he is a member of the federation's safety committee.

At present Mr. Duhamel is working on patents for a new type color plate in magazine illustration. In practice since 1875, he has assisted in the patent-granting phases of many epochal inventions, including the telephone, electric lights, submarines, wireless, airplanes, airships and linotype machine.

One of his weaknesses is the dogwood tree. Mr. Duhamel, whose home is on the edge of Rock Creek Park, is very fond of its blossoms and he is continually scattering dogwood seeds "wherever they will do the most good." His attachment to Rock Creek Park may be hereditary. One of his earliest American ancestors was Henry Darnall, who was granted 6,000 acres of land on both sides of the creek and who brought over many Scottish settlers.

10 in Family Hurt In Auto Crash on Bladensburg Road

Eleven persons, ten in one family, were injured yesterday in a head-on crash of two autos on Bladensburg road, near Seek's Corner, on the Takoma Park-Silver Spring line.

Thad Yowell, 32, of Ednor, Md., his wife, Mildred, 42; their six children; Yowell's father, Edward, 55; and Ida Poe, 65, Yowell's aunt, all were injured.

The driver of the other auto, Hugo Prager, 50, of Evenal, Md., suffered minor injuries.

Mrs. Mary Brooks, 87, Dies at Home Near Suitland

Mrs. Mary S. Brooks, 80 years a resident of Prince Georges County, died yesterday at her home near Suitland, Md. She was 87.

Mrs. Brooks was historian of Maguder Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, and a member of Clan Gregor Society.

Surviving are a sister, Mrs. E. W. Duval; a son, William M. Brooks, and three grandchildren, all of Prince Georges. Services will be held tomorrow afternoon at St. Mark's Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Strike Delays State Office Building Job

4 Unions Quit Work In Dispute Over Nonunion Men Used To Haul Materials

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, April 25.—The flow of materials from Baltimore to the $1,000,000 State office building under construction was stopped today and part of the crew of workmen on the structure failed to report, as the result of a strike called by the Baltimore Building Trades Council.

It was the first effect here of a strike called by the council to support organizing efforts of the Teamsters and Chauffeurs Union.

Electricians, plumbers, steamfitters and structural iron workers failed to report for work. Work was continued, however, by bricklayers, carpenters, hoisting engineers, laborers, asbestos coverers and others who do not belong to the council, an Amrican Federation of Labor organization.

Police were called to the scene, but there was no disorder. Pickets patroled the building.

Robert B. Sevier, superintendent of construction, said there was a two-week's supply of materials storted in the building. He said the strike was called to stop nonunion chauffeurs from delivering material to union jobs. The office building, about 70 per cent completed, is being constructed by the Davis Construction Co., which employes union labor.

Some of the material being used, Sevier said, was purchased from nonunion supply houses in Baltimore.

U. of M. Work Affected

Baltimore, April 24 (AP).—Work on new buildings for the University of Maryland in Baltimore, and several private construction projects here, was retarded today by a strike called by the Baltimore Building Trades Council.

The council said several thousand construction workmen throughout the State had stopped work on projects where material was being delivered by nonunion drivers.

The strike was called to support efforts to organize the nonunion drivers as members of the Teamsters and Chauffeurs Union.

Maryland Allows Street Car Loop In Mt. Rainier

Baltimore, Md., April 24.—Construction of a $70,000 street car loop and bus terminal at Mount Rainier, Md., by the Capital Transit Co. was approved yesterday by the Maryland Public Service Commission.

W. B. Bennett, secretary of the company, told a commission hearing that the terminal and loop would be ready for use in July. The project will include widening Perry street about 10 feet and tearing down half a dozen small office buildings near the intersection of Rhode Island avenue and Thirty-fourth street.

The company's plans have been approved by the mayor and council of Mount Rainier.

Killer Suspect Indicted by Jury

Baltimore, April 24 (AP).—Aurelio Marco Tarquinio, 45-year-old steelworker, was indicted today for the murder of his housekeeper, Mrs. Evelyn Rice, whose severed head was found buried in his backyard.

State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells said he would ask the court to set the trial for May 3. The accused torso slayer will be arraigned tomorrow.

New Madison School To Be Dedicated May 5

Charlottesville, Va., April 24.—The new high school which has been erected at Madison Courthouse will be formally dedicated on the afternoon of May 5. The dedication address will be delivered by Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction.

A feature of the Education Day program will be a pageant portraying the past, present and future of Madison County in religious, economic, social and educational aspects.

Fireproofing Figures Sought for Hospital

Richmond, April 24 (AP).—The State hospital board has authorized Eubank & Caldwell, Roanoke architects, to make an immediate survey and to estimate cost of fireproofing buildings at the Western State Hospital at Staunton.

The board at a meeting here Thursday probably will authorize similar surveys of the other State hospitals at Petersburg, Marion, Lynchburg and Williamsburg.

Jury Is Selected In Slaying Trial

Gate City, Va., April 24 (AP).—Selection of a jury was completed late today and testimony will begin tomorrow in the second trial of J. D. Bray on a charge of slaying 13-year-old Willie Mae Gentry near here last August.

Frank M. Wissler played the role of the mountain king. Miss Garner was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Tully Garner, and her grandmother, Mrs. John Nance Garner

Navy Coach Chosen Head Of Civitans

Ortland Selected District Governor At Annapolis Parley

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 24.—Henry Ortland, Annapolis, swimming coach at the Naval Academy, today was elected governor of the Chesapeake district, Civitan International.

With three newly elected lieutenant governors, the Rev. A. P. Wilson, Washington; Curt Dozier, Richmond, Va., and Kelcey Gault, Baltimore, he will be installed at a meeting to be held late in the summer.

The new officers were elected at a district meeting held at Carvel Hall. Samuel S. Stokes, president of the local Civitan Club, presided at the session attended by 47 delegates representing clubs in Maryland, Virginia, Delaware and the District of Columbia.

Stringfellow Barr, president of St. John's College, told the Civitans that the day's news suggested that liberal democracies are paralyzed, with Hitler and Mussolini doing most of the choosing and deciding."

He urged Americans who value liberalism to restate their faith and assume the responsibilities of liberty as well as its privileges.

Theodore J. Hahn, district governor, presided at conference meetings of the delegates. Other speakers were arthur Cundy, Birmingham, Ala., secretary, Civitan International, and Forrest T. Miles, Winston-Salem, N. C., president, Civitan International.

Fredericksburg Pays Tribute to Colored Deacon

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 24.—Eighty-four-year-old slave-born Joseph Walker was honored by white and colored church folk of Fredericksburg last night upon the sixty-second anniversary of his election as a deacon of Shiloh New Site Church.

Most of the vestrymen of St. George's Episcopal Church, of which Joseph has been sexton since 1878, attended, as well as white and colored ministers and other religious leaders.

Walker joined Shiloh Baptist Church in 1877, was elected deacon a few months later and has held the office since. He is now senior deacon.

His parents were slaves of Col. William Goodwin when he was born in 1854. He came here to live in 1871. He does not remember how long he has served as janitor of the National Bank here.

Fair Must Open Without Exhibit From Maryland

Baltimore, April 24 (AP).—New York's World's Fair, with or without the Maryland exhibits, opens in less than a week, and it looks like it will be without——

A member of the committee appointed by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor to figure out a way of spending the State's $35,000 for an exhibit said the committee had not yet decided on one. A meeting was scheduled for today, but postponed until later on in the week.

Court Upholds Annexation Act

Richmond, April 24 (AP).—A tribunal today upheld the constitutionality of the Richmond annexation ordinance under which the city hopes to annex parts of Henrico County.

Only one of the three judges, Frederick W. Coleman, of Fredericksburg, supported Henrico's contention that the city did not comply with the State law in the institution of annexation proceedings.

Gov. Price Fills Records Post

Richmond, Va., April 24 (AP).—Gov. Price announced today the appointment of John Watts, personnel secretary at the Public Administration Clearing House in Chicago, as junior personnel executive in the section of records and control of hte State division of the budget, effective May 8.

Watts, under the supervision of J. H. Bradford, chief of the section of records and control, will assist in the development of a comprehensive system of modern personnel records in the State government, the Governor said.

Delegate Departs For Church Session

Frederick, Md., April 24, (AP).—Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin W. Meeks left today for Kansas City, Mo., where they will attend the conference at which the three branches of the Methodist church will be united. Dr. Meeks is one of two ministerial delegates elected by the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The conference begins Wednesday.

Dr. Francis Bayley, district superintendent of the East Baltimore District of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is the other Ministerial delegate from the Conference.

Hutton to Lecture

College Board Approves 2 New Buildings

Chestertown Library, Science Structure Work to Start Soon

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., April 24.—Approval of the board of visitors and governors cleared the way today for the construction of two new buildings at Washington College, both of which officials hope will be ready for occupancy at the opening of school next September.

Ground will be broken for both a library building and a science building next month. Dr. Gilbert W. Mead, president of the college, said workmen probably would start on the projects before May 15.

The library building, which will cost about $100,000, was made possible by a gift from Dr. George A. Bunting. It will be known as the Bunting-Foxwell Library, in honor of Dr. Bunting and the late Senator Garrett Foxwell, of Kent County.

The Dunning Science Building will be built from a $70,000 gift from Dr. H. A. B. Dunning.

Man Dies of Burns

Fredericksburg, Va., April 24 (AP). Elmer Peters 45, of Fauquier County, died in Mary Washington Hospital here last night of burns suffered April 12 when gasoline he was pouring into an engine in operation ignited and set fire to his clothes.

Fire Hazard Increased

Roanoke, Va., April 24 (AP).—Lack of rain again has increased the forest fire hazard in the Alleghany district. Three fires in the district burned over hundreds of acres over the week-end. Two of them were in Pulaski County, the third in Montgomery.

19 Counties Get State Aid For Schools

Virginia Advances $57,900 to Permit 9-Month Terms For Current Year

Richmond, Va., April 24.—Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, said $57,900 was being distributed today to 19 counties to insure a nine-month term in the public schools of all counties except two.

All the funds except those for York, Elizabeth City and King George counties come from the departmentof education's discretionary fund for the aid of counties which require additional State assistance in order to operate their schools the nine months.

The additional help for the three counties comes from an elementary school fund and is distributed because of Federal reservations in their areas.

Only two counties, Scott and Buckingham, will be unable to have nine-month school terms, Dr. Hall indicated, and there is a possibility that Buckingham will be able to raise sufficient funds later to match money from the discretionary fund. The board of supervisors of Scott County has declined to provide the necessary proportion of matching funds to obtain a nine-month term this year, but has arranged a nine-month term budget for next year.

The funds sent out today included: Amelia, $1,039; Appomattox, $4,074; Cumberland, $1,115; Essex, $4,700; Frederick, $13,605; Greene, $1,257; Lancaster, $3,000; Louisa, $3,144; Lunenburg, $3,307; Mathews, $2,493; Middlesex, $1,213; Rappahannock, $4,137; Richmond, $1,779; Shenandoah, $2,500; Warren, $2,975; Westmoreland, $4,457; York, $1,000; Elizabeth City, $1,000, and King George, $1,221.

Virginians Warned Of Bogus $10 Bills

Richmond, April 24 (AP).—United States Secret Service agents issued a warning to citizens throughout the State tonight to be on the lookout for counterfeit $10 bills after one of the spurious notes was detected here.

The bogus bill is a Federal Reserve note on the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and the Federal Reserve seal has the letter "B." The check letter and face plate number in the low righthand corner on the face of the bill are 118D81.

Agents said the portrait of Alexander Hamilton is either too black or too light on the counterfei bills and that they lack the delicate detail of the genuine.

Bette Davis Excels in An Exacting Assignment

'Dark Victory' Affords Stars a Drab Role; New Operetta Association Is Forming; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

IT IS ANYTHING but a "dark" victory that Bette Davis scores in "Dark Victory." It is as bright a display of acting intelligence as Miss Davis has recently shown. However, there inevitably will be spirited dispute upon this point.

BELL

What I mean to say is that "Dark Victory," which I was privileged to view yesterday afternoon for the first time, is not a completely fascinating play. It is a little too much on the lugubrious side to please the less discriminating amusement tastes. Neither is Miss Davis' role one that is perfectly calculated to warm the heart. Judith Traherne, the role impersonated by the star, is a headstrong, over-rich, vindictive, catty little vixen who is accustomed to have her own way—with everything but death. This ominous business of the Grim Reaper is the major stymie in Judith's life and she meets it with something approaching the Spartan spirit. As you may gather, there isn't too much gayety in "Dark Victory." Neither is it continuously depressing. There are moments of high humor and effervescent spirits during the action of the tragic drama. But they are by no means dominant.

The point, though, is this. Bette Davis, in assuming the role of a neurotic and tragically doomed young woman, who finally learns that she has only a few months to live, brings to the character all of the attributes that would seem to attach naturally to a sorely afflicted and considerably bewildered young woman, who discovers a great love at about the same time that she discovers the utter futility of her life and everything she might hope to do with it. This sort of pathological study, as I have intimated, is apt to be unpleasant to those who take their screen stories as evidences of a relentless realism. At the same time, it presents concrete testimony as to the reason Miss Davis wins an Academy Award for the best acting of the year every now and again.

As I watched this talented actress' performance yesterday in the Warner projection room, the conviction was increasingly borne in upon me that I was finding the story something less than wholly agreeable for the sole reason that Bette Davis was doing an uncommonly fine piece of character delineation. In this picture she is a real clinical case. Clinical cases are not always overwhelmingly romantic, but they almost invariably are extremely interesting. You will find Miss Davis' performance all of that.

And the excellent work of the cast does not end with Miss Davis' superlative portrayal. There are at least three other members of the cast who do work easily comparable to her own. They are George Brent, as the young surgeon who falls in love with his patient; Humphrey Bogart, cast as a horse trainer who speaks a fine Irish brogue, and Geraldine Fitzgerald, who plays the role of Judith's secretary and closest friend. These three do especially impressive chores in behalf of the picture's integrity and believability.

And if you need reassurance as to the quality of the remainder of the supporting cast, you should know that it includes such notables as Ronald Reagan, Henry Travers, Cora Witherspoon, Dorothy Peterson, Charles Richman, Herbert Rawlinson and Leonard Mudie. Mr. Rawlinson, by the way, was briefly celebrated in this space yesterday. He may still be in town—I hope.

"Dark Victory," incidentally is being made the instrument of a little further shattering of precedent and smashing of customary policy at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. It will open on Thursday of this week as a concession to public demand for a quick showing of what has been widely bruited about as one of Bette Davis' best pictures. This departure from usual practice is a little different from those that have gone before it. Holding "The Adventures of Robin Hood," "You Can't Take It With You" and "Dodge City" on Thirteenth street for two weeks each entailed no tampering with the stage policy. The inauguration of the run of "Dark Victory" on Thursday, however, there will be somthing else again, as the saying goes. It Means that, on Thursday only, there will be no stage show at the Earle. "Dark Victory" will exert its single appeal to those who are able to surrender to the lure of the screen unsupported by a corollary of living entertainment. What will Zone Manager Payette and his boys think of next?

My last year's brand-new, second-hand hat is off to Sidney B. Lust, general chairman, and his committeemen for the variety and completeness of the "Show" they put on in the main ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel on last Sunday night at the sixteenth annual observance of the Fathers and Sons Banquet, fostered by the Brotherhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation. Beginning something before 5 o'clock in the evening, entertainment was continuous until approximately 10:30.

Yesterday's Post went into some detail as to the general aspects of the night's frolic, but failed to make clear the extraordinary breadth of amusement furnished the sons who took their fathers to the fiesta. E. Lawrence Phillips set up practically his whole Johnny J. Jones Exposition in the lobby of the Mayflower; Carter Barron sent his whole stage bill along to add to the pleasure of the kids and their dads, with Arthur Godfrey as master of ceremonies; Brooke Johns, with three of his sons in attendance, alternated with Sid Lust and Alvin Newmyer in putting on the show.

There were enough celebrities there to do honor to any occasion. Among old friends we ran into were George Moriarty, the veteran "poet-umpire" of the American League; Clark Griffith, Kirk Miller, Julius Peyser, Father Sheehy, of Catholic University; Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, of the Washington Cathedral; Charlie Malone, the towering footballer; Maury Salamon, Julius Lulley, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Art Brown, Tony Wakeman and so many more that it would take the telephone book to hold them.

There is an inspirational quality about these "Fathers and Sons" evenings that is as inescapable as it is heart-warming—even to an old bachelor who has reached the stage where he doesn't even get any more good offers!

The Municipal Operetta Association, sponsored by Renauz J. Smith, Al Stern and Lee Holland, will hold auditions tonight at 726 Eleventh street, for membership in the company whose services will be dedicated largely to the revival of the Victor Herbert works. Young singers, who feel that they have what it takes should be on hand. A tour of the South is planned, with guest stars singing the principal roles and a local ensemble furnishing the "atmosphere." The auditions will be under the direct supervision of Max Fichandler, a conductor with wide experience in this sort of thing.

Eye-for-Beauty Note

I was inclined to shoot him—or her, as the case may be—until I discovered it was a gorgeous Cardinal making all that fuss on my window-sill in the middle of the night at 1:30 p. m. Just a sucker for a gaudy coat!

Principals in Tense Screen Play

BETTE DAVIS AND GEORGE BRENT, as they appear in the costellar roles of the Warner Brothers' production of "Dark Victory," coming to the screen at the Earle Theater on Thursday of this week in another shattering of precedent. The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, April 24.

LAST SUMMER Burgess Meredith introduced Elaine Stern Carrington, the writer, to Franchot Tone . . . Miss Carrington then wrote a script for Tone—a script which would have been ideally suited for Meredith. Burgess indulged in some amicable name-calling . . . A few weeks ago Meredith auditioned for a radio program in which he was to portray the role of District Attorney Dewey. The script was written by Ed Byron . . . Tone auditioned for the same program. His script was written by Elaine Stern Carrington . . . Meredith's program was accepted as the better one . . . "But," the sponsors told Meredith, "while we'll use the script, we've offered the role to Franchot Tone."

THE SAM Goldwyn office, preparing to send out some publicity about James Roosevelt, discovered that they had no biographic data about him. And so they went to the one place which has the best biography of James Roosevelt—the Republican New York Herald Tribune . . . Munroe Leaf's "Ferdinand the Bull" will appear as a cartoon strip shortly . . . Cap Pearce, editor-in-chief of Harcourt, Brace, is resigning May 1 . . . The team of Oshins and Lessy, which sprang to night-club fame two years ago, dissolved this week . . . Gene Fowler accidentally fell from his chair when he sipped one drink of Scotch. "Whisky," he shouted from the floor, "always finds its own level."

NORMAN KRASNA, who wrote the new Ginger Rogers picture, last week discussed a title for the movie with Garson Kanin, the director who has become the most brilliant of Hollywood's hopefuls . . . Buddy de Sylva joined the discussion and assured: "What this picture needs is a sock title to bring in the customers" . . . Krasna leaped from his chair. "I've got it," he shouted. 'I've got the title. Let's call it '$5,000 Bank Nite Tonight.'"

WINTHROP ALDRICH, of the Rockefeller clan, will back Robert Taft for the Republican nomination . . . Taft, who was the Republican spokesman at the Gridiron dinner in Washington, made a disappointing speech and was a setup for President Roosevelt's counterspeech . . . After the Taft speech a late comer, entered the banquet hall and asked a G. O. P. leader: "What happened?" . . . "Oh," was the leader's resume, "Taft just nominated Dewey for President."

THE GOLDFISH-SWALLOWING rage which just hit the collegians is an old stunt. In Irving Stone's biography of Jack London the author reports that in 1910, on a bet, London swallowed a goldfish . . . MGM soon will announce a beauty contest for a lion cub to relieve Leo the Lion from the rigor of his introductory work. The cub will be used to introduce all MGM shorts . . . By all means read Ferdinand Pecora's new book, "Wall Street Under Oath." It's a fascinating record of some of the most historic events of our time . . . At the World's Fair grounds the words "Glass, Inc.," in front of the Glass Building are made of metal. And the word "Metal" in front of the Metals Building is made of glass.

SAM BEHRMAN, the author of "No Time for Comedy," reports that the major of a small village in northern Austria wrote a letter to Il Duce which read: "Dear Il Duce: Next week I am inaugurating an implacable, ruthless anti-Semitic purge . . . So please send me a Jew."

ROY DURSTINE, who resigned recently from the B. B. D. & O. agency, is forming a new advertising agency with two other men whose names now appear on the partnership letterheads of major advertising firms . . . At the party after the opening of "Juarez" next week, Cobina Wright, jr., will wear Bete Davis' dress and jewels . . . "What a Life," after more than a year's run, still remains the funniest show on Broadway . . . Lyman Bloomingdale of the department store family this week presented the Bloomingdale Police Trophy—a gun—to a prize-winning cop. "I just hope the cops protect this," said Bloomingdale last night and exhibited a new engagement ring he had presented to Gwen Wormser, his fiancee.

IRVING BERLIN flew back to the Coast yesterday . . . Oscar Levant has been signed by Doubleday, Doran to write a book . . . One of the episodes which will not appear in the book concerns a flight he took with Berlin from Hollywood to New York . . . The plane ran into bad weather in the Midwest. "I think something terrible's going to happen and I'm worried," said Levant. He exhibited his palm and pointed. "See why I'm worried? My life-line's broken" . . . Berlin exhibited his own palm. "Don't worry; nothing will happen," he assured. "My life-line's okay."

JOHNNY TORRIO last week forfeited $100,000 to the United States Government when he pleaded guilty to violating the income tax laws. In addition, a $2.77 assessment was added. Although the Government collected the $100,000, Torrio was removed from his cell yesterday, to be questioned regarding the collection of the additional $2.77 . . . When the WPA show, "The Swing Mikado," becomes a private enterprise shortly some of the drama critics intend to review it again—because WPA shows are reviewed with more tolerance than are other shows . . . Frank P. Corrigan, Minister to Panama, visited The Whirling Top and asked the band to play "Panama." "We haven't got that song," he was told. "Will you settle for something else?" . . . "Yes," Corrigan replied. "I'll settle for a hat by the same name—size 7¼."

Yaqui Indian Benefactor of Down and Out

A Barber by Trade, Chris-Pin Martin Recounts Film Career

By Frederick C. Othman.
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, April 24.—Chris-Pin Martin, Yaqui Indian, from Arizona, who has become Hollywood's best known Mexican caballero, today ascribed his recent movie success to prayer.

The roly-poly Chris lives in a 20-room house in the Mexican quarter of Los Angeles. Living with him are his wife, two daughters, nine grandchildren, two Hindus down on their luck, five Mexicans and four great-grandchildren. That adds up to 24 persons living on the Martin largesse.

"And a few months back," Chris said, "I was getting no work and the grocery bills were going 'way up and nobody at my house was doing anything and I said why not pray for old Chris. So everybody prayed. They set aside a whole day for it.

Prayers Are Answered

"Everyone prayed an hour at a time and there were 24 hours and 24 people including me, and whee! I get work.

"I go into "'Stagecoach.' It is a hit. I go into 'The Return of the Cisco Kid.' It is also a hit. Now I go into 'The Dove.' It will be a hit. It always is a hit. This is the third time I play in it."

"The Dove" is in production again at R.-K.-O., with Carillo, the best caballero in all Mexico, and Miss Steffi Duna as stars. Martin is the bubbling owner of the Cantina, whose duty is to provide the laughs in an otherwise hair-raising melodrama.

Chris and his one-man charitable institution make the kind of story that is scarce in Hollywood. He earns $50 a day, on the days he works, and he keeps open house for anybody who needs a meal and a place to sleep. It makes no difference to Chris.

"If a man is hungry, I feed him," he said. "If he wants a bed, I got one for him."

Entered by Back Door

Martin entered the motion picture business in 1911, by the back door.

"I was a young buck on the reservation near Tucson," he said, "and I see a train load of Indians heading West. I never had ridden on a train. So I sneak aboard and they hide me under a seat.

"And it turns out that all these Indians are going to Hollywood. They're going to be 'atmosphere' in a picture at the old Universal Studio. So I fit right in there and go to work.

"Universal promises to give every Indian $5 a week, and meat. It's funny-tasting meat to me. So I quit. I strike out on my own and pretty soon I get $2 a day working around the other studios. Only I don't act in the movies on Saturdays. I tend my regular trade.

"I'm a barber and on Saturdays I make $3 cutting hair. A few more years go by and the movies pay me $3 every day. I quit barbering."

Kay Francis "in Support"

"In the same studio and on the next stage, Kay Francis was earning $30,000 for six week's work in her first picture since she and the brothers Warner agreed to disagree. Miss Francis, for the first time in many a year, was playing a supporting role, as the wife of Cary Grant and the rival of Carole Lombard in a picture called 'Memory of Love.'

"Miss Francis, who has gained the reputation of being a temperamental actress at Warners, was in good mood at R-K-O. When we dropped by she was in the midst of taking off her reddish-colored stockings and replacing them with hosiery of a darker shade.

"'It's the new fast film,' she said. "'It makes reddish stockings look white on the screen, like trained nurses'."

'So and So's' His Stars Into Acting

Edmund Goulding can never remember the exact words, but that doesn't prevent him from saying it beautifully.

Gathering Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins and George Brent about him on the set of "The Old Maid," he demonstrates the expression and intonation he wants to govern the scene.

"This," Mr. Goulding says slowly, "is an important scene. You, Bette, have just returned from seeing Brent, the man you love and the man your sister loves. But she is about to be married to another man.

"Seizing her hands and gazing deeply into her eyes, you plead with touching expression, 'So and so, so and so, and so and so, and so and so.' But Delia is stubborn. You come around on this side of her, and then in a thin high pitched voice you say, 'so and so, so and so, so and so, so and so.' Delia whirls angrily, and in a disdainful, lofty, voice, measuring her words, she says, 'So and so, so and so, and so and so, and, of course, so and so.'"

The actors comprehend, of course, and do the scene perfectly.

Mr. Goulding has been "so and soing" successfully for years.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 24 (1935).—The brothers Warner, who profited so handsomely from their New York stage plays, are about to dabble in another Broadway "drammer." This time it is "The Outward Room," the Sidney Kingsley play. There is a method in the boys' madness, for if the play is a hit, not only will they profit from its revenue, by they will have the inside track on nabbing it for a movie.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The idea for young Kingsley's play came from Millicent Brand's novel, and it is the type of play into which Bette Davis, Warners' fair-haired girl, could sink her teeth and do a really great job. You guessed it. After "The Outward Room" has its fling on the stage it will star the future Mrs. George Brent.

Sad-eyed little Sybil Jason whose earnings disappeared into thin air and who has had too much trouble for a little girl, has a bright outlook ahead of her. When the little 10-year-old actress did an outstanding characterization in Shirley Temple's "Little Princess," the critics raved over her ability. She is so different from Shirley there can be no chance for competition and Mrs. Temple was happy to give her approval to the contract. Darryl Zanuck has just signed with the little South Africa character actress. Darryl, who has been responsible for the wise handling of the golden Temple child and Jane Withers, will, I have little doubt, build Sybil into another Twentieth Century-Fox starlet.

Victor Saville arrived in our fair city today with Mrs. Saville and knocked into a cocked hat all previous plans for Robert Donat. Closely associated with the temperamental Donat, Saville seems to know what's best for him. So after a conference with Ben Goetz, Louis B. Mayer, Eddie Mannix and the rest of the M-G-M bosses, it was decided to discard all previous plans and star Donat in "Kindling," Neville Shute's book, which is timely right now. But when you hear more about this coming movie you can forget "Kindling" for the new title is "Ruined City." Why, I wonder, when the book is so well known?

Either Joan Crawford is the smartest star in Hollywood or vice versa. I am inclined to believe she does deserve a medal for being sensible enough to realize a star cannot go on ad infinitum playing glamour girls and keep her public interested. Joan's first move to prove her sincerity in taking roles that while not leads, were still good, was in "The Women." Now she plays a part in "Not Too Narrow, Not Too Deep" that makes up in character what it lacks in length. Yes, M-G-M is filming the Richard Sale book, in spite of its Devil's Island locale. But it will be changed to the French government, which objected to Warner Brothers "Devil's Island," won't be unhappy.

Snooks numbers at the Feldman birthday party and was a riot. Marlene Dietrich gave out three songs, Peggy Fears entertained, Dick Powell did his best crooning and those who didn't play cards danced until the wee hours. William Haines was busy taking bows on the Feldman decorations which were superb in green and white.

Elsa Maxwell, so excited about her first movie, is really thinner. Darryl Zanuck walked in while we were talking and told her no dieting allowed. He wants her plumpish. Not only was the Charlie Feldman surprise party the nicest given in a long time, but it was the best attended. Almost everybody was there, including Claudette Colbert; Miriam Hopkins, wearing a white snood, was with her husband, Anatole Litvak, which should quiet the gossip there is trouble there. Kendall and Lewis Milestone, Litvak and Jessie Barthelmess went from table to table singing Russian songs to the accompaniment of a Russian guitar player; Dick Barthelmess leaves tomorrow night for Guaymas to fish; Pat O'Brien receiving the sympathy of everybody who knew his father; the elder O'Brien passed away in his sleep Sunday night. The Earl of Warwick telephoned to say farewell; he leaves for three months in his native England. Is the Marjorie Weaver-Rudy Vallee twosome on the up and up, or is it just another publicity stunt?

Who was the pretty blonde to whom Brian Aherne was so devoted at the Mischa Elman concert? Barney Barnato, son of the diamond king, here with his wife, stopping at the Beverly Wilshire; the Jack Warners will host a large party tomorrow night at the "Juarez" premiere and Ann, who has been ill, will make her first appearance in several weeks; Bette Davis and George Brent will be in the Donald Crisp party and the Paul Munis will be guests of William Dieterle.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

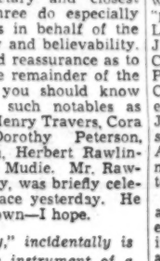
In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., April 24.—I wonder if newspapers realize what they're letting themselves in for when they start a contest and promise the winner that she will appear in a motion picture?



HOPPER

The latest arrival, Florence Farley, from New York, aged 16, did a scene that will probably run three seconds in "The Star Makes." She was chaperoned here by a New York schoolteacher. On her arrival she had to join the Screen Actor's Guild, and our board of education said: "What's this? You haven't notified us."

Well, they were told she had a teacher from New York, but "that means nothing to us," they said, "you have to have one of ours—or else!"

So the newcomer played her scene under the watchful eye of two schoolteachers. Our stars and producers may think they have dictator powers, but it doesn't mean a thing when a child is working. Because a teacher can walk up to any director and say: "Sorry, it's 5 o'clock. We finish now."

A few days before Olympe Bradna was 18, with her graduation papers all set, she was leaving with her mother on a p. a. tour with her picture, "Stolen Heaven," and was told she'd have to take a teacher along. She did, and that teacher got a Stolen Heaven with pay!

I wasn't surprised, but pretty mad, that our top stars didn't show up at Pickfair when Mary entertained Dorothy Thompson. Is it because they don't know who Miss Thompson is? Or that they don't want to know about international affairs? Or even about a great American? If it had been a visiting mogul from a foreign land they would have swarmed. Or is it because our hostess is no longer active in pictures?

A few years ago when Mary issued an invitation each of them would have broken a leg getting there.

I asked Miss Thompson how she collected such an unending fund of information. She said, "My friends supply me from all corners of the world. I may be boasting, but sometimes I believe my brain trust, which isn't paid, is better than our President's."

She had a grand visit with her 7-year-old son, who lunched with the Dead End kids by request. Sinclair Lewis seemed strangely out of the picture. For a moment I thought he was the forgotten man. I wonder if he isn't a little jealous of his wife's fame?

Son also met Bergen and McCarthy, but complained to them, "When I go back to school and tell them I talked to Charlie, they won't believe me. How about visiting my school and proving it?" Charlie was willing but Bergen had other plans!

When Nick Grinde was taken suddenly ill on "Million-Dollar Legs" cutter Eddie De Mytryk was given his chance. And so good, he's now on the director's list. Must we wait for more accidents?

Mickey Rooney says he's not tired of the Hardy series, but wants to prove he's an actor. He's put in a bid for "The Hunch Back of Notre Dame" and "Don Juan."

Nats Slug to Beat Red Sox in Tenth, 10 to 9

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Boston, April 24—Staid old Boston is in a bit of a dither these days, tumbling over itself to acclaim a young man named Ted Williams. Any day now, the citizens will be picking out a nice site on Boston Commons and asking the price on monuments.

POVICH

Young Mr. Williams wears the uniform of the Red Sox and with less than a week of big league baseball to his credit he is already somewhat of a character. Boston fans cheer him whenever he pokes his nose out of the dugout, and inspired baseball writers are already comparing him with a fellow named Babe Ruth.

He plays the outfield for the Red Sox and is Boston's challenge to Joe DiMaggio. Up here they think he can do everything that DiMaggio does, and perhaps better. They're a bit divided in some of their opinions. They are not exactly sure whether he bats like Joe Jackson or Tris Speaker.

They like him an awful lot, and perhaps with reason. Yesterday, for example, he hit a home run to right, a double to left, a single to right center and a single to left center. His home run he parked into the distant rightfield bleachers where only three homers have landed since Fenway Park underwent its face-lifting in 1932.

It's rather remarkable, too. We don't mean his hitting, exactly. It's rather remarkable that Boston, with its Kelleys, its O'Sheas and its Finnegans, has taken to its bosom a ball player who is not Irish. Williams, the books say, is English. But that seems to make no difference. Up here he has created a terrific stir.

The fellow was something of a character even before he joined the Red Sox. He's only 20, but the baseball correspondents in the South gave him a terrific build-up. It seems that he is what the trade calls good copy. And he undoubtedly is. He isn't bothered much about anything besides baseball, and we learn that he never wore a necktie until two weeks ago. The only hat he ever owned was the baseball cap he happened to be wearing.

Sought Lajoie's Style

He's a 6-foot 3-inch 175-pounder, a spare-ribbed sort of fellow who gets his power from terrific wrist action and we hear that his only love is base hits. He's serious about his baseball. When he joined the Red Sox this spring he sought out Hughey Duffy and asked Duffy to teach him Nap Lajoie's batting style. He finally settled for a Joe Jackson stance at the plate.

He was up with the Red Sox last spring, in fact, as an untamed kid from San Diego, and lasted only a week in the Boston camp. They sent him to Minneapolis, and he came back this year as the batting champion of the American Association with a .366 average and 43 home runs. But there were times last summer at Minneapolis when he appeared to be a difficult sort of a fellow.

Donie Bush Gets Answered

There was the time for example, when he whacked out a line drive two bagger and was dashing about near second base while Manager Donie Bush was yelling instructions. "Tag up and run if it's a fly ball," yelled Bush, adding, "watch for a pitch-out, too."

Answered Williams:

"I got down here all right, and you let me tend to the rest of the running."

There was the time, too, at Minneapolis when, 5 minutes before game time, he took off his uniform and started to don his civilian clothes. Manager Bush asked him the meaning of it all and Williams said he wasn't playing. The custodian of the club's balls had refused to give him a ball for a friend and he wasn't going to stand for it. The little matter was straightened out.

Another Dizzy Dean Maybe

Eddie Collins, general manager of the Red Sox, discovered Williams three years ago. On a scouting trip to the coast, where he was surveying the talents of Second Baseman Bobby Doerr, Collins noted a 17-year-old string-bean in the San Diego outfield. The upshot was that he bought both Doerr and Williams.

With the Red Sox he has been tamed a bit, but not entirely. Joe Cronin took him out of a ball game in Atlanta en route North because he picked up a fly ball he had missed and chucked it over the centerfield fence in a display of temper. And after making four hits against the Athletics the other day, he greeted a crowd of fans at the park gates after the game with "Who wants my autograph?"

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 24.—Baseball is the world's most honest game, but it is not entirely free of sub rosa dealing, and the latest instance of this is the case of Zeke Bonura. He drove in more than 100 runs for the Washington Nationals last year, had a good fielding percentage, and hit more than 22 home runs, though he played 77 games, in the toughest park in the majors. But he was waived out of the American League. To all intents and purposes, no team would pay even the $7,500 waiver price for him.

CONSIDINE

Yet the Giants paid $25,000 for him and he promises to become one of the heaviest hitters in the league. This is the story:

Clark Griffith, Bonura's 1938 boss, got an informal nibble from the Giants for the heavy-legged first baseman's services. The price tag he set was $25,000, and the Giants agreed. Now Alva Bradley and Connie Mack wanted to put night baseball into their parks this year, but by underground telegraph they heard that old Griff was going to vote vigorously against it. They needed unanimous consent, and Griff was the lone holdout against them, with a good chance of winning over Ed Barrow, of the Yanks, to his side.

So when Griff put Bonura's name on the waiver list, as the first timid step in selling him to the Giants for more than three times the waiver price that he would have brought from an American League team, Bradley and Mack refused to waive. For a couple of days it appeared as if Griffith either would have to sell Bonura to Philadelphia (who had first call on him for $7,500, or keep him with Washington. But at the winter meeting, Bradley and Mack promised to waive on Bonura if Griffith voted for night ball in their towns. The deal was made and Zeke went to the Giants for $17,500 more than Griffith could have gotten for him in his own league.

Thoroughbreds Do Have 'Horse Sense'

Herbert Bayard Swope recently expressed the belief that a thoroughbred horse is one of the world's dumbest animals, and after a disastrous day at Jamaica we are inclined to string along with the self-effacing fellow. Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons doesn't agree, however. In fact he was a little upset, when we mentioned it.

"Now gee shoo," the old trainer lustily swore, "that isn't a nice thing to say at all. Of course thoroughbreds can't do many tricks. That's because they're never taught anything like that. But they're smart instinctively. That I know. Why jimminy willikers, I've seen Exterminator get out of line at the post just to push some fractious colt in place. It isn't any fairy story, either, that he used to watch the starter so he wouldn't be left.

"There was an old horse named Old Rockport I used to know," Fitz mused. "He never had much care, I guess, but he knew the rules. For instance he knew he wasn't supposed to have too much water right after a race, so the stable hand used to set a bucket of water out for him, and Old Rockport would take three laps around the exercise circle, cooling out, then take a sip. Then three more, and so on, until he had enough to drink.

"I've seen Seabiscuit walk out of the winners' ring because he spotted in the crowd the boy who gives him a drink after a race. He threw a boy once during a race, but he waited for the jockey to remount. Then there was Omaha, for instance. He broke away when they were taking him off the boat when they took him to England. Looked pretty bad there for a minute, with a nervous thoroughbred loose on a pier, but one of the grooms yelled for him, and he came a'running back to him just like a puppy."

Two More Eggs in Boxing's Basket

The boxing world laid two eggs over the week-end that will never be hatched. Sydney Hulls, the British promoter, got a measure of publicity by offering Joe Louis $150,000 to fight Tommy Farr in London in the fall, and Lou Nova told reporters that if Max Baer refused to fight cleanly, in their June 1 tiff, Max would "suffer the circumstances."

Permit us a poof.

In the first place Louis very probably is going to stay here this fall and fight the winner of the Baer-Nova thing. There is a razor-thin chance that if Nova beats Baer that Ray Carlen, Lou's manager, will find some inspired reason to carry the Nova-Louis fight over into the summer of 1940, to give Lou an opportunity to clean up a little more dough before Louis dry-cleans him. But even that is doubtful, for if the Nova-Baer thing is a spectacular fight, one way or the other, the winner's match against Louis is almost certain to be a million-dollar battle. And million-bob gates aren't ignored.

As for the possibility of dirty work in the Baer-Nova fight the chief trouble with the contest, as viewed from this standpoint, is the incorrigible fairness of both men. They are painfully sportsmanlike, and we are afraid that they couldn't get downright bar-roomy in their action if they were equipped with shillelahs and building bricks.

Spencer's Record 67 Wins Pro Tourney

Baltimore Mark Broken By 3 Shots

Pairs With Rippy to Win Pro-Amateur At Mount Pleasant; Scores 6 Birdies

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, April 24.—Mount Pleasant, touted as the toughest golf course in Baltimore with its mammoth greens, was conquered by Cliff Spencer, nattily attired Beaver Dam professional, who cracked the course record by three strokes with a great 67 here today, the first time 70 has ever been lowered on the municipal layout.

Spencer, playing with a new set of irons and a putter he has been using for only two weeks, easily won the pro sweepstakes in the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. event and paired with Claude Rippy, Indian Spring amateur, to win the pro-am honors with a 68.

The score, five shots under par and three better than competitive 70's registered by Johnny Bass, Wiffy Cox, Host Pro Bill Schreiber and Ernest Caldwell on previous occasions, will be a mark for the top public links players of the Nation, as they jest the course in the national championships late in July. It will stand as an official course mark as the tourney was played from the extreme back tees over the course measuring 6,885 yards.

Improve All Way

Spencer and Rippy, playing with Jim Flattery, Baltimore C. C. pro, and his partner, Southpaw Bill Paire, were the last foursome off the tee. They were three under par at the ninth and getting stronger every hole, and despite the scores already turned in, the remainder of the field reserved first place for them.

Johnny Bass, Clifton Park professional, played a sub-par round of 71 and was helped two strokes by both his partners, the Rolling Road duo of Spencer Overton and E. G. Barnes. They split second prize with 69s.

Bass and Leo Walper, District driving range mentor, divided second money in the pro sweepstakes with the 71s, Walper going out in two under par and returning in 37, while Bass was 35 and 36.

District pro-amateur duos monopolized a six-way tie for last money with best ball 70s, Leo Walper figuring twice with Frank Williams, Washington, and Eddie Bean, Indian Spring, as partners; George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood, was in the money twice with Roger Peacock, Indian Spring, and Maury Fitzgerald, Kenwood, while Al Houghton and Peacock also had 70 and John O'Donnell, Edgewood Arsenal, and Charles Graw, jr., of the host club, had a like score.

Bags Six Birdies

Spencer's round included six birdies, and the crowd that gathered around the home green to watch the Beaver Dam mentor put the finishing touches on a new course mark saw him miss a 6-footer for a seventh birdie and a 66.

He started by holing a 4-footer on the first hole and then made his only slip of the day, going over on the third hole by trapping his second shot. Cliff rapped in 12-foot putts on six and seven for birdies, and holed a 10-footer on nine for a par and out nine of 34.

Still holding a "hot" hand with his new putter, he holed a 20-foot par putt on the eleventh, 3-foot putt for a birdie on the twelfth, another of the same distance for a birdie on the fourteenth, 10-footer for a par on the fifteenth and almost holed a spoon shot for a hole in one

Net of 80 Wins Weekly Ladies' Event For City Champion

Marion Brown, Manor Club's city champion, played her home course in 84 strokes yesterday, from nines of 44 and 40, and deducted a 4 handicap for a net 80 and low net among the members in the weekly ladies' day event.

Mrs. L. G. Pray was second with 88—7—81; Mrs. Jack Daily third, 93—11—82, and Mrs. Snow next with 111—28—83.

Mrs. M. J. Torlinski, Army-Navy, paced the guests with 41, 50—91—16—75, with Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional, next with 43, 40—83—4—79, the lowest gross score of the day. The inside nine prize went to Mrs. J. G. Taylor, 85—17—68.

CAPITAL

Newton O. Wood scored the first ace in the history of the fifteenth hole at Capital Golf Club, a 185-yard one-shooter, yesterday, using a spoon for the perfect shot. It was one of the few holes left in the city that had not been the victim of an ace.

Joseph C. O'Connell, Frank J. O'Connell and J. A. Walker were witnesses.

ARGYLE

Bert Langhenry hit the lucky number in the blind bogey tournament at Argyle with an 89—10—79, while four tied for second prize, J. E. Haas, 91—18—72; Bob Stearns, 87—15—72; Phil Brousseau, 83—11—72, and H. L. Wilson, 92—20—72. Two 74 nets were also among the prize winners, A. B. Evans, 98—24, and Fred Murray, 84—10.

AL HOUGHTON

Al Houghton, District professional, who has served with several of the local clubs, is the new coach-instructor of the Georgetown Preparatory School golf team. Houghton will take charge of the team and give group lessons to the entire school.

Simmons 'Beaned' by Mungo As Bees Beat Dodgers, 4 to 1

Former Nat Star Hit in Head by Curve Ball; Extent of Injury Not Immediately Determined

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, April 24.—Behind the six-hit pitching of Lou Fette, the Boston Bees whipped the Dodgers, 4 to 1, today, handing Van Mungo a defeat in his first baseball start since last August.

One of Mungo's side-arm curves hit Outfielder Al Simmons in the head in the third inning and knocked him out. An X-ray examination was performed to determine the extent of his injury.

Simmons was at bat with two out and a mate on first base. He regained consciousness while lying on the field and was assisted to the clubhouse by teammates, retiring from the game.

Dr. Francis W. Curran was called in to perform an X-ray examination.

The temperamental fireballer gave up only five hits in the eight innings he worked, but three of them were bunched in the second when the Bees clinched the game with two runs. A Brooklyn error netted another run in the fourth and Tony Cuccinello clouted a homer in the ninth.

Newsome's Bobble Lets in Winning Run; Pearson Victor

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 24.—Monte Pearson went to the post for the first time this season and pitched the Yankees to a tight 2-to-1 victory over the Athletics, before a crowd of 5,820 fans who turned out to welcome the world champions back to their home park.

The stylish right-hander gave up only four hits, no more than one an inning. Although the Yankees were able to tag Nelson Potter and Chubby Dean for only three safe blows, one of these was a homer by Red Rolfe in the sixth. The other Yankee run came in the seventh, when Dean lost his control and walked two men, and Skeeter Newsome fumbled a ground ball to le the tally across.

Pearson's control was right today, and when he's that way the slim Californian is hard to beat. He walked only one batter and fanned three. The only run off him came in the seventh when Bob Johnson walked, went to third on Dario Lodigiani's two-bagger and came home on a fielder's choice.

Rolfe's homer was the fifth of the season for the Yankees and dropped in the lower rightfield stands. It was in the same sixth inning that Potter lost his stuff and was taken out after Rolfe's four-bagger, a single by Joe DiMaggio and a walk to Lou Gehrig.

WrightScores On Wasdell's Single to Win

First Baseman Gets First Hit of Year To Decide See-Saw Battle at Boston

By Shirley Povich.

Boston, Mass., April 24.—Out of a welter of 33 base hits and a half dozen errors, the Nats extracted a 10-9 victory over the Red Sox late this afternoon. It required ten innings.

For the Red Sox, it was not a painless extraction. At one point in the proceedings they held a 4-2 lead, and they crowded four runs into the eighth and ninth innings to tie the score and conjure visions of winning the ball game. The day was raw, and that also describes the Boston pitching.

Manager Joe Cronin, in a frenzy to check the sudden show of Washington batting power, tossed five pitchers into the proceedings. He seemingly was playing his trump when he sent young Jim Bagby into the box in the tenth after the Sox had tied the score at 9-9.

But the Nats, base-hit crazy today, didn't discriminate. And the decisive hit was contributed by Jimmy Wasdell, who, incidentally, was making his first hit of the season. When Bagby served up a slow ball to Wasdell with two out in the tenth, that young man slapped it into centerfield for a single to score Taft Wright with the winning run.

Sammy West inspired that run in the tenth by greeting Bagby with a single to center, but the tension eased for the Red Sox when Tate Wright bunted very ineptly and caused West to be forced out at second. But Buddy Myer slapped a single over Doerr's head to move Wright to third and restore the uneasiness among the 4,000 customers.

Haynes Triumphs

Cecil Travis was no help with his line drive into the glove of Doerr, and Myer narrowly succeeded in racing back to first to avert a double play. Then along came Wasdell to punch the first pitch to leftfield and the Nats had their winning run.

It was a triumph, too, for young Joe Haynes, who today was pitching from a big league mound for the first time in his life. The Nats' Charlotte product relieved Jimmy DeShong in the eighth inning and was party to a three-run Boston uprising in that chapter, and in the ninth he pitched the tying run at the Red Sox. But in the tenth he made the Nats' 10-9 lead stand up nicely.

There was some doubt about how Haynes would fare in that tenth when Jimmy Foxx lashed a single off Travis glove, to open the inning, and Joe Cronin sacrificed him to second. Tabor dropped a single at the feet of Sammy West, but Foxx was unable to advance on the hit. Then Haynes came through nicely. He disposed of the dangerous Ted Williams on a pop to Gelbert and sealed his triumph by ridding himself of Bobby Doerr on a high loft to West.

Weaver Goes Good

All told, the Nats collected 16 hits for their efforts today, and the Red Sox accumulated 17. But seven bases on balls issued by the Red Sox hurlers were exceedingly harmful.

Monte Weaver, the Nats' old pal, was the only one among the Red Sox's five pitchers to turn in a scoreless job and he hurled only one inning. Jack Wilson was knocked from the box in the seventh, Jake Wade failed to last out the eighth,

Maryland Trounces V. P. I., 25 to 8, for Eighth Victory

Hard-Hitting Terrapins Get 21 Safeties

Gobblers Contribute Eight Errors to Aid Maryland's Cause; Dwyer Is Winner

By Jack Munhall.

Virginia Tech's Gobblers preserved their perfect baseball record yesterday and they did so easily. They gave Maryland's hard-hitting Terrapins 21 hits and kicked in with eight opportune errors besides, to lose their eighth game in as many starts this season, 25-8.

The stands at College Park were teeming with approximately 1,000 students when the 2½-hour travesty began but at the bitter end, as dark crept in to cover the field, exactly 26 loyal Old Liners were around to see the culmination of their team's eighth victory. It was the second Southern Conference triumph in three tries for Burt Shipley's nine which upset Georgetown Saturday.

Frank Dwyer, one of Maryland's second-string pitchers, started against the Gobblers, who bowed to Maryland, 22-5, in their first game this season at Lexington. Dwyer, a studious-looking slender right-hander, worked five innings, permitted only two hits and was credited with his first victory.

Charley Woodward and Newton Cox finished out the game for Maryland and did not do badly, although the Gobblers bunched hits and walks to score six of their runs in the last four frames.

Hugh Keller, brother of the Yankee's rookie outfielder, was the batting hero for the Old Liners. He hit two home runs in one inning—the fourth as 12 Old Liners came to bat—and also contributed a single in four trips to the plate. Keller led off the inning with a blast to rightfield with Adam Bengoechea aboard. About nine batters and 15 minutes later Keller got up again and this time he duplicated his previous poke, although he was helped in his circuit by poor fielding by the V. P. I. gardener.

MacCloed homered for Gobblers with one on in the seventh, the only hit Woodward gave them.

Other batting leaders for Maryland were George Knepley, Bob Burns and Angel (Shorty) Chambris, who each got three hits and Arthur Rudy who, substituting for Knepley at first, banged out a triple and a double in two trips for a perfect day.

Greenbrier Track Squad Is Beaten

Lewisburg, W. Va., April 24.—The West Virginia University freshmen caught up with Greenbrier Military School track team by taking first and third in the next to the last event to tie the score at 54-all today and then Hill and Haley took first and second in the broad jump to give the collegians a 61 to 55 victory.

Schwartz, Greenbrier star, took the high and low hurdles and then tied for first in the pole vault and placed third in the broad jump to lead both teams with 20 points. McCue and Romanski, with 10 each, paced the Mountaineer yearlings.

Noone, Handicapper, Retires From Track

New York, April 24 (U.P.).—Appointment of Jack Guenther as racing editor of the United Press was announced today. He succeeds Thomas H. Noone, who resigned because of illness.

Guenther comes to New York from the Los Angeles bureau of the United Press, where he specialized in turf coverage at Santa Anita, Hollywood Park, Del Mar and other Pacific Coast tracks.

Terp Shows Two Ways of Scoring the Same Run

Maryland University's Adam Bengoechea, third baseman, was forced to cross the plate twice in the third inning to score one run, but the second time was by far the easiest. Early in the inning he slid into home (left) after racing all the way from first on a overthrow, but was called back to third because of a ground rule. A few seconds later (right) he again came in, this time standing up when Hugh Keller rapped out a clean single. The Terps, by the way, beat V. P. I., 25-8

185 Entries In Keefer Cup Tournament

Two-Day Affair At Chevy Chase Starts Tomorrow

Mrs. Frank H. Kramer, chairman of the tournament committee of the Women's District Golf Association, announced 185 entries for the Mrs. Frank H. Keefer Cup tournament at Chevy Chase tomorrow and Thursday. Mrs. Hugh Rowan paired the field. Helen Dettweiler will make her first local tournament appearance for the trophy donated by the three-time president of the local asscioation. It is one of the largest fields in years.

The entire field will play tomorrow, and the low 32 net scores will qualify for the final day's play.

The Brighter Side . . .

RUNYON

Our contacts with the movie colony of Hollywood on the occasion of our recent visit to southern California were, we regret to say, of the most casual nature.

We had hoped to be able to report to our fellow cash customers of the movies interesting conversations with the great figures of the screen and sidelights on their personalities, and all that sort of business, but we got off to a bad start.

We went to a place in Hollywood that is infested largely by cinema characters and to our great delight we were immediately presented to a gentleman who has long been our ideal of what an actor ought to be.

A gentleman of mature years, mark you, and of distinguished appearance, including one mustache. A gentleman, who on the screen, often gives depictions that require at least a resemblance of culture and refinement. A gentleman of reputation and of social background and attainments. In short, such a gentleman as you feel is a privilege and a pleasure to meet.

Well, do you know what that gentleman had in the hand that he thrust forward to shake the hand that shook the hand of John L. Sullivan? He had one of those things that goes buzz-buzz-buzz when it contacts your

Bridges Wins His Second, 4-2, Over Browns

Detroit Star Gives St. Louis Six Hits As Tigers Triumph

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 24.—Tommy Bridges, veteran righthander, rang up his second pitching triumph of the season today as the Detroit Tigers defeated the St. Louis Browns, 4 to 2.

Bridges allowed but six hits and fielding lapses by his teammates permitted both St. Louis runs. Detroit obtained nine safeties off Fred Johnson, 43-year-old St. Louis flinger.

The Tigers broke a 2-2 deadlock in the eighth inning, scoring twice—on a single by Barney McCosky, a sacrifice by Fred Walker, a double by Charley Gehringer and another single by Ervin (Pete) Fox.

The win lifted the Tigers into second place in the American League standings with four victories and two defeats.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson,
(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Seven Nats figure in the Man of the Month award on the basis of yesterday's performances at Boston, where the Nats emerged with a tenth-inning victory.

To Taft Wright, two points, because he drove in three runs with a pair of doubles and figured in three other runs.

To Jimmy Wasdell, two points, because his single to left with two out in the tenth won the ball game.

To Joe Haynes, one point, because he made the Nats' one-run lead stand up in the tenth inning.

To Cecil Travis, one point, because he made three hits, including a triple, and played brilliantly in the field.

McKinley High Rallies in Seventh to Beat Blair Nine, 6-5

Errors Help Tech Defeat County Boys

Clarke Outstanding For Blair at Bat With Triple, Double And a Single

McKinley High, after suffering a loss in its opening baseball game of the season, struck pay dirt yesterday when it staged a two-run uprising in the final inning to beat Montgomery Blair High on its own diamond, 6-5.

Responsibility for the loss was laid to Ed Schrider, backstop of Blair, who fumbled a strike-out pitch to Baba Wiles, picked it up in time to throw the latter out at first, but allowed Charley Kendall to score the sixth run in the process. Kendall brought Leroy Curtis in with the first score on a single that went for three bases through the hands of Ed Clarke, Blair right-fielder.

Though he allowed one of the winning runs, Clarke was outstanding at the bat for the county lads, needing only a home run for a "grand slam" at the plate. He singled in the fourth, doubled in the seventh and tripled in the first.

Blair also had the best pitching performance of the day. Johnnie Norris went the seven-inning route and gave up but five hits. Loffler hurled five stanzas for Tech and gave up 6 hits, while Webb finished up with 2 hits in as many periods.

Slivinski Signs With Redskins

The Washington Redskins added potential strength to the middle of their professional football line yesterday with the signing of one of their outstanding draftees, Steve Slivinski. The 210-pound University of Washington guard was an all-coast selection last year and was one of four Washington U. players drafted by George Marshall's club.

Signing of Slivinski brought to two the number of Washington U. players having come to terms with Marshall. Dick Farman, another all-coast choice, signed last week. He is a tackle. The holdouts from the Huskies are Al Cruver and Jimmy Johnston, a pair of fleet-footed halfbacks.

Wilson High Slugs to Beat St.Albans, 22-4

Poore and Norman Check Foes; Winners Register 20 Safeties

Revenge for its defeat in the Inter-High series last week was taken by Woodrow Wilson's baseball team yesterday when it pounded St. Albans' pitching for 20 hits and took advantage of numerous errors to win by 22-4.

Two President hurlers, Jack Poore and Lee Norman, performed creditably in the seven-inning game, the first working for five innings, allowing five hits and one walk and striking out one man, and the latter giving up no hits in the final two stanzas while he struck out two. Bill Alexandre issued eight walks besides his 20 hits.

In the fifth inning, Wilson realized seven runs off a wild assortment of extra-base hits, errors and free passes. It scored four runs in each of the first two inning to take an early lead. St. Albans, beaten by a wide margin by Charlotte Hall last week, was only able to score in the third inning when a let down on Wilson's part allowed four runs to come in.

Wilson Teachers Beat Eagles, 5-4, in 10-Inning City Battle

After two unsuccessful attempts to get in the victory column, Wilson Teachers College won its first game of the season yesterday at Griffith Stadium the hard way. It edged out a local rival, American University, by a 5-4 count in the tenth inning.

It was a see-saw battle until the eighth inning when two Wilson Teachers runs knotted the shifting score and sent the game into extra innings. And then it was a misplay on the part of Hugo Schultze that put Wilson in a position to score the winning run. Nau walked to start the tenth, and when he set out to steal second, Schultze's toss was wild enough to allow him to go to third. Nau romped over the plate a few plays later when Lewis set down a perfect single in center-field.

Pregame dope gave American, the loser, a distinct edge but the Teachers didn't seem to worry about it. American had taken a close 9-7 victory over Johns Hopkins, while Wilson had fallen to the same team in an earlier start.

So unconcerned over its rating was Wilson, in fact, that it smashed out 16 hits off the offerings of two Eagle hurlers. Credit for the victory went to Hart, whose slants over the ten innings were touched for only eight hits, though three of them were for extra bases. Pete Sitnik was slugged for 15 safeties in the first eight innings, and he gave over to Bob Hall, who allowed but one in the last two sessions.

One run in the third inning put American in an early lead, and it improved on that by another run in the fourth. Wilson tied the count at 2-2 in its half of the fourth, but saw American again soar into the lead in the sixth with another brace of tallies.

V.M.I. Frosh Nine Rallies to Win, 9-5

Lexington, Va., April 24.—V. M. I. freshman baseballers came from behind in the late innings here today to take a 9-5 victory from the Magicians of Jefferson High School, Roanoke. The win was the third straight for the little Keydets.

The visitors did all their scoring in the first two innings, driving Naiswald from the mound with three runs in the first inning and adding two more off Spessard in the second, including Powell Woody's home run.

The Keydets broke into the scoring with a lone run in the fifth and added four each in the sixth and seventh, collecting 14 hits from three Magician pitchers. Cadet John Wray's two doubles and a single in five victories led the day's hitting.

The easing of political tenseness in Europe is like the snapping of a suspender button. It relieves the tension without promoting security.

The diplomats are going back to work subject to change without notice. The Balkan nations are pretty much like mud turtles looking at tomorrow's menu to see if genuine Chesapeake terrapin stew is scheduled.

Whether it's right or not they know it will be made out of them.

Tech's Track Squad Defeats Episcopalians

Score Is 72 2-3—44 1-3 At Alexandria; High Scoring to Wedding

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, April 24.—Victorious over Episcopal High School in their opening meet last Friday, McKinley Tech trackmen recorded their second straight triumph over Alexandria opposition here this afternoon by outscoring the George Washington High, 72 2-3 to 44 1-3. It was the losers' first start under the direction of Willis Benner, former University of Maryland athlete.

The Presidents held the invaders on even terms in the field events, winning three out of six first places, but Tech's superiority on the cinder path carried it to a decisive victory. The Washingtonians yielded only two firsts in the running events while winning five.

In addition to holding a wide margin in first places, the visitors scored heavily in the runner-up divisions. They recorded clean sweeps in both the 100 and 200-yard dashes, and at least two Tech entries scored in all but three events.

Homer Wedding, versatile Tech entry, topped the individual scorers with a total of 15 points, winning first places in three events. He won both the 100 and 220 yard dashes, and then topped his performance by taking first place in the broad jump with a leap of 200 feet 11½ inches.

Dick O'Brien came up as a double winner for the Washingtonians by winning both hurdles races, while Edwards took second in both the javelin and discus throws.

Harvey Bourn, veteran G. W. distance runner, gave the President their only victories in the running events by winning both the mile and the half-mile.

100-YARD DASH—Won by Wedding (T.); second, Leavell (T.); third, Ballard (T.). Time, 10.6 seconds.

220-YARD DASH—Won by Wedding (T.); second, Ballard (T.); third, Leavell (T.). Time, 24.6 seconds.

Kenwood Is Host To Women Golfers

Kenwood Golf and Country Club played host to 36 lady golfers yesterday in the first Invitation by Club golf play of the season. Guests were from Argyle, Beaver Dam and Woodmont.

Players were divided into "odd" and "even" teams and competition was of the best ball variety. "Evens" won the affair with a best ball of 85, while their opponents were one back with 86. Only four of the ladies managed to crack 100, and 95 was the best total turned in. The last was credited to Mrs. J. C. Dale, of Kenwood. Mrs. C. L. Vaile, also of Kenwood, had 96; Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, of Woodmont, had 98, and Mrs. Stuart Smith, of Argyle, checked in with 99.

Thursday's Mat Card Complete; Chewaki Matched

With Jack Hader, Kansas baker boy, still pouting because he cannot get two referees in the ring Thursday night at Turner's Arena for his bout with the Golden Terror, Promoter Joe Turner's emissaries yesterday announced the card for the night.

George Pencheff, Australian champion, will meet Ace Gordon, newcomer, in the 30-minute opener, and Rosy Red Ryan will meet the evil villain, Chief Chewaki, Gypsy-Indian groan artist. Hader and The Terror, who were unable to settle their differences in last week's match, which they followed by making faces at each other in the dressing room, are being rematched.

Hand Stained
CALFSKIN

The biggest, newest thing in shoes since black calf oxfords made the headlines. Introduced by Florsheim, hand-stained calfskin changed the shoe shade of a nation overnight. Men like the rich, mellow aged tone it gives tan shoes. Style illustrated $10.

Sun Plume, Sure Miss Score in Havre de Grace Features

Two Winners Are Ridden By Stevenson

Sun Plume Rewards Backers $11.40 and Sure Miss Pays Off At $10.50 Price

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 24.—Melody Maid, ridden by Apprentice Jockey R. Bateman, led virtually all the way to win the seventh race in the interests of J. Bachrach and her backers who collected a $12.60 mutuel. She finished two and a half lengths in front of Squabble with Saranite third, in the limit field of 12 going a mile and a sixteenth

Havre de Grace, Md., April 24.—The Millsdale Stable's Sun Plume and Mrs. M. N. Bond's Sure Miss won the co-feature races here this afternoon. Sun Plume took the fifth event, named the Glen Oaks Purse, after Sure Miss had driven home ahead in the fourth race, tagged the Elkton Purse.

These 6-furlong races were splits of one original event and both ends were run in the identical time of 1:13 2-5. In addition both winners were ridden by Jockey Charlie Stevenson. To keep up the comparison, both fields drew eight horses and in each case the winner came to the outside and got up in the final eighth to score. In addition, there was but little difference in the winning price. Sun Plume paid $11.40 and Sure Miss paid $10.50.

Sun Plume was rated in fifth position as the field went to the turn. Gay Amazon set the pace with Suzanne Peck and Skiffler closest to her. Stevenson did not put Sun Plume to a stiff drive until reaching the stretch. He responded with a rush that his rivals couldn't match.

Sure Miss ran about the same kind of race. Royal Teddy and Refreshment struggled for the pace-making honors while Stevenson coasted Sure Miss along. When the filly was asked to drive she came with good energy to be opening a gap at the end.

Stevenson came back after his two feature victories to put up another brilliant ride aboard Rowes Crump, a $7.70 favorite, in the sixth race. A prominent last as the field turned into the backstretch, Rowes Crump picked up his rivals and at the finish was driving along a length and a half in advance of Taunton with Bill Bleiweiss in third position. The race was full of paddock tips, but all were out of the pay circle.

Daily doubling for the day brought a return of $184.70 to those who invested the usual deuce on the chances of Howard Bruce's Ponemah in the first race and J. H. C. Forbes' Riotous in the second event.

Ponemah, ridden by Mannie Berg, galloped off with the first race for juveniles at the usual 4½ furlongs route. Damaged Goods was second and Dark Rapture, a member of the mutuel "field," was third.

Eddie Smith, Washington jockey, did a good job aboard Riotous. He brought the filly along with a rush in the closing stages and she downed Fly Me, Mr. Duncannon and nine others.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PONEMAH, $7.00, $4.70, $3.40; DAMAGED GOODS, $4.80, $4.60; DARK RAPTURE (entry), $4.40.

PONEMAH hustled to the front at once, drew out gradually and won with speed in reserve. DAMAGED GOODS broke well back, was rushed to contention and closed gamely. DARK RAPTURE raced on the extreme outside while closest to the pace to the stretch and weakened slightly in the closing drive. VIGNETTE tired gradually through the stretch after being a keen forward factor. OSOFREE went evenly. SEALOCH was off alertly and had no excuses. The others were not prominent at any stage.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving, place same. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:06. Winner, J. H. C. Forbes' br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RIOTOUS, $22.00, $9.50, $6.80; FLY ME, $13.80, $9.80; MR. DUNCANNON, $6.90.

RIOTOUS had the speed to take command going to the turn, shook off MR. DUNCANNON and withstood a long drive to hold FLY ME safe in the closing stages. FLY ME went to the outside for racing room leaving the backstretch, came gamely to reach the leader in the stretch and fought it out willingly. MR. DUNCANNON forced the early pace and weakened gradually in the stretch run. MOON HARVEST was hard rushed to gain contention in the early stages and was not a serious factor thereafter.

Daily Double, Ponemah and Riotous, Paid $184.70.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving, place same. Went to post at 3:36. Off at 3:41. Winner, O. S. Jennings' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—UGIN, $12.00, $7.10, $3.70; DIZZY DAME, $12.40, $6.70; GREAT HASTE, $3.30.

UGIN, within striking distance of the leaders from the start, came with a bold drive in the closing test to be up in the concluding stride. DIZZY DAME raced on the inside of LITTLE DRIFT and CORNWALLIS, saved ground entering the stretch and fought it out with good courage on the inside. GREAT HASTE was hard ridden and moved lapped on UGIN in the final stages. CORNWALLIS forced the pace and weakened slightly at the end.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:11½. Off at 4:14. Winner, Mrs. M. N. Bond's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SURE MISS, $10.50, $4.60, $3.20; ROYAL TEDDY, $8.70, $5.40; ROQESPIERRE, $5.30.

SURE MISS was rated in the early running, swung to the outside of the leaders while holding her position entering the stretch and came willingly under pressure to win going away. ROYAL TEDDY forced and set the pace with REFRESHMENT, saved much ground entering the stretch and held on willingly. ROBESPIERRE, slow to begin, came to the inside entering the straightaway and closed full of run.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall. Won driving, place same. Went to post at 4:42. Off at 4:45. Winner, Millsdale Stable's ch. c. (3), by Sun Brier—Angry Flame. Trained by A. Pelletieri. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN PLUME, $11.40, $6.40, $4.30; SUZANNE PECK, $7.00, $4.90; GAY AMAZON, 10.50.

SUN PLUME, steadied along during the early stages, was taken to the outside of the leaders while moving up sharply approaching the stretch and came with a bold rush in the closing sixteenth to be up in the final stride. SUZANNE PECK followed the pace of GAY AMAZON to the stretch and fought it out with good energy. GAY AMAZON, first away, opened a gap nearing the turn, but tired suddenly in the closing stages. PHARA BELLE weakened after being a keen forward factor to midstretch.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving, place same. Went to post at 5:17. Off at 5:17½. Winner, Mrs. G. Two dollar mutuels paid—ROWES CRUMP, $7.70, $4.30, $2.60; TAUNTON, $7.40, $4.50; BILL BLEIWEISS, $3.20.

ROWES CRUMP, allowed to settle into best stride and a trailer to the backstretch, was sent to the outside, gained steadily and wore down the leaders to be opening a gap at the end. TAUNTON, rated close in the early stages, came willingly under pressure in the closing test. BILL BLEIWEISS shook off SALBURNE while setting the pace and held on gamely to just miss.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving, place same. Went to post at 5:47½. Off at 5:48½. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MELODY MAID, $12.60, $6.10, $5.50; SQUABBLE, $6.90, $7.10; SARANITE, $15.50.

MELODY MAID ran DARK MAY into submission, opened a good lead and was not seriously threatened, but was put to a drive in the closing stages. SQUABBLE, rated while within striking distance of the leaders, responded when shaken up to close gamely on the outside. SARANITE was a forward factor from the start, was steadied along closest to the pace of MELODY MAID and held on gamely.

Bribe Offer Is Revealed In Race Probe

By the Associated Press.

Tallahassee, Fla., April 24.—Fred B. Kent, Jacksonville attorney, today told a legislative committee investigating Florida's racing situation that Miami race track interests offered Gov. Cone $50,000, but that the Governor refused the money.

Kent said the money was proferred by an agent for Hialeah Race Track and E. R. Bradley, noted sportsman.

He said the money was offered as a contribution of the Governor's campaign deficit and the man who made the offer said "he didn't want anything for it." Kent then declared he mentioned the matter to the Governor later and the chief executive replied he would not consider accepting the contribution.

Kent said he did not know the name of the man who offered him $50,000 but probably could identify him, even though the offer was made almost three years ago.

Kent said Hialeah officials approached him to fight authorization for night races, but decided not to employ any lawyer for the case. He declined to confirm the assertion of E. R. Graham, committee chairman, that the track men wanted him on the pay roll to take advantage of his influence with the State administration.

Signal Light Scratched

London, April 24 (AP).—Mrs. James Corrigan's Signal Light, one of the two American-owned horses eligible for Wednesday's Two Thousand Guineas at Newmarket, was scratched today. William Woodward's Hypnotist is the remaining American entry.

Dear Al:

Despite his second in the $15,000 Chesapeake, Impound is a doubtful starter in the Kentucky Derby. A. G. Vanderbilt made this statement yesterday in the paddock when he was saddling his Floradora Girl in the first race. Impound, shipped to New York, will start in the Wood Memorial there on Saturday. Vanderbilt did not say, but the recent injury of Trainer Bud Stotler in an auto accident may be a factor in Impound being reserved for the Preakness. Challedon, W. L. Brann's Derby hope, will leave here on Thursday for Louisville and, barring accidents, will line up at the post in the $50,000 classic. Trainer Lou Schaefer was satisfied with Challedon's Chesapeake performance. While he would not say, it is believed he will start Challedon once in Kentucky before the Derby. The horse, Mucho Gusto, was sired by Marvin May while the latter was being used as a "teaser." How about the drunk on the race train Saturday night singing "Take Me Out to the Ball Game." He might have been the same guy who got shut out on a bet and when the horse won he tore up his $2 bill. Jockey Mannie Berg may miss Charles Town this year. He seems to be doing pretty well around the milers. Tiger Sam continues to murder the King's English. In ordering theater tickets, he said, "Reverse me two on the magazine floor." S. Chris claimed Brass Bottle out of today's third race. Charlotte Girl, winner of the 1938 Kindergarten Stakes, will arrive at Pimlico this week. She goes in the Pimlico Oaks. Thirteen jumpers in charge of Tommy Hitchcock have arrived at the Baltimore course. There is a report that Johnny Gilbert has been offered a mount in the Preakness if he can get reinstated by the Maryland Racing Commission.

BILL.

First race—Belle High was the winner over this same field of juveniles last week and should experience little trouble repeating the feat today. Spout Run was second to the top horse in that heat decided over a muddy track. With a fast track in prospect he may upset the dope. Baltee has shown good recent form and has money chance.

Second race—Flying Lark set the early pace in her only start this year and quit in the final sixteenth. With that effort under her belt she figures to take the top and never be headed with these cheap ones. Kaptime was second to mediocre platers at Bowie, is in form, appears the one to beat. Key Man can better poor recent races.

Third race—Mattapony was off badly in her only start here but closed fast, receiving much interference in the stretch run. Running with the same class of horses today she has the edge. Fyan won at first asking at Bowie and will provide most of the contention. Gold Knightess had no excuses last out in Florida; is in good hands and may upset the dope.

Fourth race—Alma was much the best of a high-class field of 3-year-olds last Thursday and previously was second to Day Off in the Louisiana Derby. Gets the call here. Morstep was an easy winner of his last and is returning to the good form he displayed with stake horses last year. The one to beat. Hants has class; can prove dangerous on best efforts.

Fifth race—Challephen was second, beaten a short nose by Honey Cloud at Bowie. He raced creditably with stake horses last year and is in form and ready to win this. Heelfly has the class of the race but recent form has been very poor, has been working well. Teddy Weed won the closing day's handicap at Tropical Park and rates a good chance.

Sixth race—San Antioca was second to Dark Friend, beating Fight Back and Lady Roma in the mud last outing. She is nicely placed here, is in form, and appears a standout. The Lake needed his race when sprinting behind Billy Bee and appears the logical contender. Lourdes can better a disappointing race last outing.

Seventh race—Banner Girl indicates good form by her recent third to Phara Belle. She is a classy filly and performed consistently in better grade company in Florida. Best effort should win it. Coursing needed conditioning in his race last week and gets a good figure with his light weight at this distance. Bob Junior should go well. Chance for third place.

Best bet—San Antioca.

Underwriters To Celebrate Golden Jubilee

D. C. Life Insurance Group to Mark Date With Friday Luncheon

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A four-feature program is announced by the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association for its next luncheon meeting, Friday, April 28, at the Willard Hotel at 12:15 p. m. First, nominations for directors for the new administrative year will be made. Second, Stanley E. Martin, general agent for the State Mutual Life Assurance Co., at Columbus, Ohio, and former member of the Million Dollar Round Table Club of ace salesmen, will be a guest speaker, having as his subject "Sales Motivation."

The day will also mark the fiftieth anniversary of the National Association of Life Underwriters, parent organization, and to commemorate it, most of the 308 local units with their 30,000 members are meeting at luncheons throughout the country, the Philadelphia meeting being addressed by Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, who will talk on "Life Insurance—The American Way," after being introduced by President Helgar Johnson of the National Association.

Local underwriters have secured a transcription of Senator Taft's talk in advance and it will be reproduced at their luncheon exactly as he is giving it in Philadelphia. To bring his message to the general public, however, the local group has also arranged for it to be broadcast over Station WOL at 6:45 o'clock that evening.

Martin Guest Speaker

Mr. Martin, next Friday's local speaker, is 40 years old and a native of Columbus, Ohio. He is a graduate of Ohio State University and a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity.

He has been in the insurance business nine years and was a member of the Million Dollar Round Table three times in that period.

Previous to entering the life insurance business, Mr. Martin traveled for a shoe company and then went into the real estate business, in which he was highly successful. Late in 1930 he entered the life insurance business and in his first year wrote in excess of $500,000. His original life insurance connection was the Pacific Muthal, in which he led the company in pro-

The '3 Musketeers' Acquire Control Of T. & W. Air Line

New York, April 24 (U.P.).—The dramatic story of the rise of three young men who started in the airline business when all you needed was a plane and a prayer, tonight reached a climax when Jack Frye, 35, dark-haired president of Transcontinental and Western Air, emerged in virtual control of the airline.

Frye and Paul E. Richter, two of the three men who were known as "The Three Musketeers" 12 years ago when they pioneered one of the first airlines in the West, today acquired the TWA holdings of Lehman Brothers, New York banking firm, and John Hertz, sr., Chicago taxicab magnate. It was said that the block was 70,000 shares.

Frye, Richter and Walt Hamilton started out with a few nondescript airplanes a dozen years ago, parlayed ambition, luck and technical skill into a transcontinental system.

Once a Soda Jerk

Frye, a former soda jerk in a Los Angeles drug store, started his first airline in 1927—a line called Standard Airlines which operated between Los Angeles and Tucson, Ariz. He taught Richter, his chunky little sidekick, to fly and brought Walt Hamilton, an aeronautical engineer, into the combination. Since that day the three never have parted. Frye and Richter engineered a merger between Aero Corporation, parent company of the Los Angeles-Tucson line, West Air Express and the old T. A. T.-Maddux Line, which flew trimotored Fords on the first transcontinental route.

In 1933 Frye stole a march on the air transport world by putting the Douglas DC2's into operation—first of the mammoth skyliners which now ply the airlines from one end of the country to the other. Frye said that TWA would expand its service on May 1 to more than 17,000,000 seat miles a month, the largest operating schedule it ever has flown.

Steel Operations Sag for 4th Week

New York, April 24 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will decline 2.3 points to 48.6 per cent of capacity, compared with 50.9 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations were at the rate of 56.1 per cent of capacity, while a year ago they were 32.0 per cent.

The 4.5 per cent drop in operations carried the Nation's steel mill activity to the lowest point since the final week of 1938 when output went to 38.8 per cent of capacity. The decline in the current week is the fourth consecutive weekly drop for a cumulative total of 7.5 points.

Wabash Railway Increases Deficit

St. Louis, April 24 (AP).—Receivers of the Wabash Railway reported today a deficit of $8,127,890 for 1938 which they attributed to "unsettled business conditions." In their annual report to stockholders, Norman B. Pitcairn and Frank C. Nicodemus, jr., the receivers, pointed out that this was an increase of $3,076,098 over the previous year's deficit.

The "sharp decline in general business activity," they said, caused a decrease of $5,661,407, or 12.77 per cent, in railway operating revenue, as compared with 1937.

Business Loans Continue to Rise

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday the sixth consecutive weekly increase of commercial, industrial and agricultural loans by banks of leading cities.

Banks in 101 cities reported an increase of $6,000,000 to a total of $3,858,000,000. Banks in the Boston district led with an increase of $7,000,000. For the 101 leading cities, however, commercial loan totals still were $350,000,000 below a year ago.

Cotton, Active, Gains as Much As $1.85 a Bale

Advance Follows Agreement for 2 Cents Export Subsidy

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 24.—In the most active trading in months, cotton futures pushed up for top gains of $1 to $1.85 a bale today on news of the Washington agreement between the President and Southern Senators for 2-cents-a-pound cotton export subsidy.

On a buoyant opening the new crop months flashes the biggest gains. In later dealings when profit selling assumed large proportions there was a general retreat from the highs and the close was 16 to 19 points net higher.

The subsidy development over the week-end apparently came as a surprise to the trade for there was a lively scramble for contracts at ing represented short covering and the start.

A considerable part of the buythere was also a lively call for contracts by straddle interests against sales in Liverpool. Price fixing by trade and mill accounts swelled the demand to peak proportions before the weight of profit taking brought a recession.

Exports today, 11,013 bales; season so far, 3,101,063. Port receipts, 4,737; port stocks, 2,157,785.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures retreated today in the wake of lower lard prices. The close was 3 to 4 points down on sales of 99 lots. May ended 6.57 bid; July, 6.79 bid; September, 6.89 bid; October, 6.90; December, 6.92.

Crude oil held steady in the Southeast and valley at 5½ cents bid and Texas 5⅜@5½ cents.

Sears, Roebuck Set New Record For the Season

New York, April 24 (AP).—Sales of the big mail order house of Sears, Roebuck & Co., are the largest for this season in the history of the company, stockholders were informed today by Gen. Robert E. Wood, chairman, in the annual meeting. In the first quarter, Wood said, the company's profit was about double that of the comparable period last year.

He suggested, however, that dividend payments may not be as liberal as in 1936 and 1937 because of the changes in the Federal tax on undistributed profits, which penalized profits withheld for reserves while the old levy was in effect.

Allied Chemical & Dye

Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation's sales in the first three months ran about 15 per cent ahead of the same period last year, H. F. Atherton, president, said at the annual shareholders' meeting. Earnings, he added, exceeded the dividend requirements of $1.50 a share on the common stock for the quarter. No material change in sales has been apparent so far in April, Atherton observed.

Closing Prices Dip After Firm Opening; Steelmaking News Chills Buyers; Treasury Issues Firm in Bond Market

New York, April 24.—Shares started on a steady note today but announcement of a further decline in the steelmaking rate and continued softness in the copper price discouraged buying and quotations slipped lower in the afternoon. The close found a wide range of stocks down fractions to a point with coppers, motors and steels the heaviest losers. Utilities, on the eve of a large offering of securities by a Canadian power concern, showed some independent strength. Volume of trading on the big board amounted to only 414,110 shares with 15 of the 621 issues traded accounting for 110,700 shares.

Pivotals again figured prominently in the active descriptions of the day. Among these were General Motors, Steel common, Chrysler, Eastman, North American and General Electric. Chrysler, up about a point in the early dealings, closed ⅞ net lower, while Steel common cancelled a ⅜ gain and substituted a ⅝ loss. Gyrations of this type were typical. Eastman's appearance in the active list for the first time in quite a long period, reminded the financial district that the company's offering of rights to stockholders expires Thursday. Although the stock declined 2⅜ points, the close at 139⅛ left the rights still attractive.

Steel at 48.6 per cent

The steel operating report, which came out at noon, marked the turning point. Output, which was lower for the fourth consecutive week, reached a 1939 low of 48.6 per cent. At the same time, predictions appeared that because of the obscure domestic outlook, steelmaking is likely to decline to around 40 by midyear.

General Motors report for the first quarter, which is announced tomorrow morning, should be a factor in the day's trading although earnings of $1.18 a share were in line with estimates from several sources over the last few weeks. The fact that profit was at the best level for the March quarter for any year since 1929, however, should convince the street that although the motor car makers are not as busy as they expected, their sales are at good levels.

The unlooked for expansion of automobile assemblies in the last fortnight and the large increases shown in new car registrations compared with a year ago, reflect this vigor in consumer demand.

The weakness of oil issues with the general list could only be accounted for by paralysis to the buying side. Traders who usually get behind the petroleum issues at this time of year, have held to the sidelines chiefly because of the reiteration of warnings by oil leaders that stocks and production of petroleum and products are excessive. Standard Oil of New Jersey gave up 1⅝ points, an unusually wide swing for the issue, on sales of 3,400 shares.

Allied Chemical closed 2 lower and others to end with losses of a point or more included Union Carbide, Texas Corporation, Kennecott, International Harvester, Bethlehem Steel and Atchison, the 100 representative big board stocks ended 0.37 lower, while the average loss for ten aviations was 0.41 point.

Bond Changes Narrow

The idle tone prevailing in recent sessions of the bond market on the stock exchange continued today at the opening of a new week with prices for most domestic issues showing little change from Saturday. Treasury's maintained a firm tone for most of the active issues in limited turnover.

In the foreign section there was some recovery among Italian and German obligations, while Japanese bonds sold down. Argentines also were lower in the more active issues. Canadians scored fractional gains in several instances.

The domestic list showed the average for 30 bonds down .05 point from Saturday. Ten rails were unchanged on the average, and five second-grade rails were off .46 point. Ten industrials moved ahead .07, while five industrials were unchanged.

Activity in Manhattan Railway issues at sharp advances into new high ground for the year formed a contrast with most of the remainder of the market. Fractional changes within a narrow range of the previous close were the rule for most of the list.

Alleghany Corp. Plans Contingent Basis of Interest

New York, April 24 (AP).—A spokesman for the management of Alleghany Corp., said today they were considering a solicitation of holders of 5 per cent bonds of 1950 for voluntary assents to a plan putting the interest requirements on a cumulative contingent basis.

The management was described as planning to make the solicitation simultaneously with that for assents from holders of the 5s of 1944 and the 5s of 1949, which are better collateralized issues, to approve a plan to use deposited cash for purchase and retirement below par of outstanding bonds. Under such a plan, some $1,300,000 of the 5s of 1950 have been purchased and retired.

Retail Advertising Less Than Year Ago

Chicago, April 24.—Due to the fact that Easter fell on April 17, 1938, whereas it came on Apirl 9 this year, retail advertising in newspaper of 80 major cities for the week ended April 15 was 9.2 per cent below the corresponding week of last year, Advertising Age reported today.

For the seven days ended April 15, reporting newspapers carried a total of 19,428,112 lines of retail display advertising, compared with 21,397,662 lines in the corresponding week of last year.

General Motors Quarter Net $1.18 Per Share

Profit Compares With 14 Cents in First 1938 Quarter

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 24.—General Motors Corporation reported today net earnings for the March quarter of $53,177,928, or $1.18 a common share, compared with $8,234,017, or 14 cents a share, in the like quarter of 1938.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman, commenting in the report on industry in general, wrote: "There does not appear to be economic justification for any drastic decline at this time, unless the economic situation is affected adversely by events from without due to political difficulties abroad. It appears likely, therefore, that the trend of business will be influenced by day-to-day occurrences."

Accompanying the report was a statement on "our business picture," which said in part: "As national income increases, our present burden of taxes will become relatively easier to carry. The production of goods and services in amounts sufficient to raise the national income to former levels—and above—is therefore the most important task before us today.

Giants' Rally Fails, Phillies Win Third, 6-5

New Yorkers Score Five in Eighth But Fail to Catch Foes

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 24.—The New York Giants staged a five-run rally in the eighth inning today, but the outburst fell just short and the Phillies won their third straight victory by a 6-to-5 margin over Bill Terry's Terriers.

Morrie Arnovich's two-run homer in the fourth off Clyde Castleman paced the Phils attack. In the seventh, the Phils put the game on ice with a four run blast off Johnny Wittig.

Big Max Butcher held the Giants to four hit; through the first seven frames, but fell apart in the eighth. The Giants belted him off the mound and threatened to tie it up at the expense of Jim Henry, but Walter Beck was rushed in and put out the fire.

palm, giving you a synthetic shock and some startlement, especially coming from a gentleman fitting the above description.

Just a Bloke

We suppose we have met up with that specific tomfoolery a thousand times, and to tell the truth, we used to go around giving that buzz-buzz-buzz business to friends ourself, until a fellow with a weak heart up and fainted on us, but, of course, we are not supposed to be a gentleman of culture and refinement or of social background, etc., etc. We are just a bloke.

We passed the incident off with the customary silly laugh which is the only way you can pass off incidents of that nature, and we assure you we were not at all sore at the gentleman. We were just disappointed in him. Disappointed and disillusioned.

We decided that he is just a bloke, too, and from now on when we see that genteel looking figure of his on the screen and hear his carefully modulated tones, we will be thinking of him, not as the character he is depicting, but as a slightly eccentric old gentleman going around ploying jokes.

We gave up on the movie celebrities right then and there and went out looking for Mr. Pete Reilley, who we had heard was in the city. We said to ourself if we had to be with jokesters we would be better off with professionals than with amateurs. Mr. Pete Reilley is a New York manager of prizefighters, far-famed for his jokes.

We always feel reasonably safe with Mr. Reilley because we are constantly on guard against his jokes. You can protect yourself against a fellow that you know is going to play jokes on you but not against one who appears before you cloaked in the dignity of a reputation for gentility, and with a buzzer in his duke.

He Likes Explosions

Mr. Pete Reilley would consider that buzzer thing quite corny. He gave it up years ago. It never struck Mr. Reilley as half as humorous as shaking hands with a gentleman with a gob of tar in your mitt. The only strictly mechanical device that ever appealed to Mr. Reilley was a little gadget that would explode a small bomb in your car as you stepped on the starter.

When this gadget enjoyed popularity with Mr. Reilley, he caused great turmoil throughout the Broadway precinct of New York. It was nothing to see fellows leaping out of their cars and running for dear life as the bombs went off under their tootsies. We used to know Mr. Reilley was in our vicinity any time we reached a hand into a coat pocket and found the pocket loaded with ice—or maybe ice cream.

We foresaw the possibility of having other ideals ruined if we remained around those movie celebrities. We felt that it would be a dire calamity if we ran into Miss Garbo and she maneuvered us into a chair with a battery attached to it, or something like that, or if we encountered Mr. Boyer and he started in giving us the double table. Our sense of humor about jokes depends largely upon the source thereof.

Anyway, we found Mr. Pete Reilley in a local restaurant and he seemed in excellent spirits. Mr. Good Time Charley Friedman had ordered a Welsh rarebit and Mr. Reilley had been out in the kitchen interviewing the cook. He had given the cook $5 to make Mr. Good Time Charley Friedman's rarebit of limburger cheese and Mr. Reilley's pleasure as he watched Mr. Friedman endeavoring to assimilate this concoction was truly beautiful to behold.

Limburger cheese has always figured largely in Mr. Reilley's jokes. Sometimes he used to employ it in preference to all other substances in his palm when he shook hands with you. Sometimes he used to place quantities of it on the steering wheels of parked automobiles. Once he put some of it in the hatband of our sconce piece and we were an object of repugnance to even the usually affectionate little Pekinese in our home.

But you see Mr. Reilley wore no moustache to deceive us.

Henrich Makes a Face—but He's Out

Tommy Henrich was a dead bird in the first inning of yesterday's Yank-Athletic game when DiMaggio hit a grounder to Lodigiani who tossed to Ganterbein at second for the fielder's choice. The Yankees won, 2-1 and Elden Auker also was pounded.

Jimmy DeShong appeared to have his first 1939 victory won when the Nats, with Taft Wright swatting a pair of doubles, tied the score in the seventh, and took a 9-5 lead in the eighth, but he faltered and Harris was forced to lift him in favor of Rookie Haynes.

At odd times, though, DeShong pitched brilliantly. There was the seventh inning, for example, when, after filling the bases with none out, Jimmy emerged undamaged and elicited the cheers of even the hostile Boston fans.

There should have been mentioned before this, perhaps, the fact that Cecil Travis actually saved the ball game in the eighth when, with a three-run Boston rally in full cry, he dashed back of second base and came up with a back-handed stop of Jimmy Foxx's drive to flip it to Buddy Myer with his gloved hand for a force-out. With that play Travis cut off at least two runs.

Vosmick Leads Attack

Joe Vosmik led the early attack on DeShong, his single in the first inning and his double in the third setting the Red Sox up in a 2-0 lead. It was not until the fourth that the Nats could score. In that inning after Taft Wright walked, Travis pushed him to third with a single and Rick Ferrell scored him with a long fly to left.

The Nats tied the score at 2-2 in the fifth when Case doubled to right and Gelbert singled to left, but in the same inning James E. Foxx hit his No. 1 home run of 1939 with Vosmik on base, and the score was revised to read 4-2, Red Sox.

Travis got a run back for the Nats in the fifth with a triple, and then gave it back to the Red Sox with a wild throw in the latter part of the same inning. But in the seventh Washington came up with two runs to tie the score at 5-5. Charley Gelbert started that uprising with a triple off the leftfield wall, his third straight hit, and when West singled and Wright doubled to left, Wilson left the scene. Travis drove in the tying run against Jake Wade with a single to center.

Wright Scores Two

Wade had a horrible time of it in the eighth, which DeShong started with a single to center. He filled the bases by walking Gelbert and West, with one out, and then Wright banged a double to center to move a pair of runs across the plate. Myer's grounder drove in a third run, and when Auker fumbled Travis' drive into the box a fourth run scored and the Nats had a 9-to-5 lead.

DeShong staggered in the eighth after Gelbert's muff of Desautels' drive, and pitched singles to Pinch-hitter Peacock and Joe Vosmik. Vosmik's blow scored two runners, and at that point, with his lead cut to 9 to 7, DeShong was lifted in favor of Haynes, who yielded a third run on Tabor's drive through the box.

Haynes couldn't make his 9-to-8 lead stand up in the ninth. Desautels slamming a two-bagger to right with one out and scoring on Pinch-hitter Peacock's single to center. But Haynes did very well in the tenth.

Krakauskas Hurls Today's Game

Boston, April 24.—Joe Krakauskas, batted out of the box by the Yankees in the Griffith Stadium opener, will go back to the mound tomorrow against the Red Sox.

Manager Joe Cronin will start the left-handed Fred Ostermueller, nemesis of the Nats in former seasons.

Chicago Cubs Win Opener At Home, 6-2

Bruins Turn Back Pirates; 15,000 Turn Out for Game

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 24.—The Chicago Cubs opened their home season auspiciously before 15,000 fans today by whipping Pittsburgh, 6 to 2, for their third victory in four games. The Pirates haven't won a game since they beat the Reds opening day in Cincinnati.

The Cubs massed a 12-hit attack off Jim Tobin and Mace Brown while Earl Whitehill, making his National League debut and pitching for the first time this spring, limited the Pirates to but six hits in seven innings. Jack Russell finished the game, after Whitehill tired, and yielded only one hit in two innings.

Tobin scored on one of the two Buc runs in the fifth when he lifted a home run over the leftfield bleachers. The Pirates got their other run in the sixth on singles by Gus Suhr and Bill Brubaker and a wild pitch by Whitehill.

Bobby Riggs Tops Hot Springs Draw

Hot Springs, Va., April 24 (AP).—Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, was seeded No. 1 for the annual Hot Springs Spring Invitation Tennis Tournament which opens here tomorrow and extends through Friday.

Other Davis Cup hopefuls among the entries were seeded in this order: Wayne Sabin, Elwood Cooke, August Ganzenmuller, John Shostron, J. Gilbert Hall and Frank X. Shields. Capt. Walter Pate, nonplaying manager of the Davis Cup squad, said the showing here would determine which men would be sent to Cincinnati for the Hilltop courts yesterday court championships.

Romo, Alzek Meet Tonight In Arena Bout

Winner Is Slated to Get Shot at Ambers At Stadium

Chico Romo, Colorado's lightweight champion, will meet Eddie Alzek, of New York, tonight at Turner's Arena in an eight-round bout that develops as a fight to pick an opponent for Lou Ambers in a proposed match early this summer in Griffith Stadium.

After a trip to Baltimore yesterday to confer with Charlie Goldman, representing Al Weill, Ambers' manager, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn returned triumphantly to Washington with the announcement that the winner of the Romo-Alzek bout tonight probably will get a match with Ambers here.

Romo, stablemate of Mexican Joe Silva, is a newcomer to Washington, while Alzek is known as the conqueror of Pete Galiano, Joey Straiges and Bucky Taylor. Tonight's winner will have to put on an impressive showing, however, to convince the Ambers camp of the worth of the proposed bout, it was believed.

In the other eight-rounders, George Zamaris, hailing from Tony Galento's home town, Orange, N. J., and who holds a knockout over Melio Bettina, New York light-heavyweight champion, will meet Red Lewis, of Richmond, and Frankie Wills will meet Brookman in a featherweight "grudge" fight.

The card will open with a four-round bout between two colored middleweights, Tommy Marlis, of New York, and Kid Norfolk.

Fish and Game Moguls to Meet

Hagerstown, April 24.—Officials of eight fish and game clubs in Washington County are meeting this week in an effort to agree upon someone they can jointly back for appointment to the State Conservation Commission. It was learned that Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor has indicated that one of the commissioners will come from one of the four counties—Garrett, Allegany, Washington or Frederick.

Garrett County, through its Sportsmen's Association, already has recommended the name of Bernard I. Gonder, and several Allegany County sportsmen's groups are backing J. Wesley Kelly, Cumberland, president of the Western Maryland Wildlife Federation. Three Washington Countians have been mentioned for the position—H. E. McFaddin and Roger Q. Cook, both members of the Conococheague Sportsmen's Club of Hagerstown, and Joseph M. Hoffman, president of the Potomac Fish and Game Club of Williamsport. Frederick County is understood to have several candidates.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, April 24.—Although prices on the whole were well maintained in the stock market today, dealings were checked in anticipation of the budget message and Chancellor Hitler's Reichstag message, both due this week. Some speculative industrials shaded lower. Commodities shares, especially golds, held firm. Transatlantics moved narrowly. British funds turned down after a steady start, while most European loans closed about unchanged.

Paris.—Prices shifted unevenly in the bourse today in quiet trading. Bank of France gained 10 francs, while rentes closed 20 centimes down to as much higher. Suez Canal dipped 245 francs, but Royal Dutch moved narrowly

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Robert M. Brannon, former editor for Ely Culbertson and now in charge of bridge activities at the Garden City Hotel, Garden City, Long Island, offers contradictory evidence to his chief's statement that "cards possess an inner logic." In an article in this month's "Bridge World" Brannon says:

"Cards are cockeyed!" and proceeds to describe the hand shown in today's box as proof.

"This was strictly a family fight," he begins, "here at the hotel, the foursome being composed of Mr. and Mrs. Kelsey (my daughter and her husband), Mrs. Brannon and myself. Gents versus ladies.

"There were three passes around to me, and I made a perfectly law-abiding, self-respecting bid of one no trump. There was no harm in that, was there? My daughter overcalled with two diamonds, Mr. Kelsey passed, and Mrs. Brannon bid three clubs.

"'Trying to make the going tough, father?' I remarked to my partner. And just to show them that they were monkeying with a live wire, I doubled.

"'Father is always at his best on defense,' I said as I led a small heart right up to the singleton king. Round one to the ladies. Now comes a spade to dummy's singleton ace. Round two for the girls. Back comes a heart for a ruff. Round three for the women folk. A return spade and ruff in dummy makes it four in a row. Back comes a heart and a ruff, my ace falling by the wayside. A third spade is now led and stepped on in dummy. I had now lost only three of my sure winners the ace of hearts and the king and queen of spades.

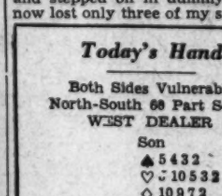
"'Getting better every minute,' Mr. Kelsey opined.

"'Don't you worry,' I protested. 'I've got the situation well in hand—they just set up my king, queen of diamonds!'

"When a second diamond was now led from dummy, I tossed in my king quickly before Mr. Kelsey could play (I was afraid he might waste a trump) and was pulling in the trick when the lady who swore to obey and protect me, dropped on a trump.

"Here's the way it looked to me at the end of the eighth round:

"Mrs. Brannon then led the ten of spades and here was the set-up:



"I gave the matter careful consideration and elected to play the club five. Perhaps I should have played the ten and let dummy see what a narrow squeak she had. A diamond was now ruffed with the seven and the queen of trumps returned.

"I played small. 'Don't worry, partner,' I urged, 'I'll surprise you in a minute.' I did. I took the twelfth trick with my ace. I conceded the thirteenth trick."

The Railroad Retirement Board Athletic Association sponsors a cabaret dance Saturday evening at the Wardman Park Hotel. The hour is 10 o'clock. . . . The first annual dance of the Federal Transportation Association will be held at the Wardman Park on Saturday. The party is informal. Persons in all Federal transportation branches are invited.

The Civil Service Commission has completed a survey of more than 500 college graduates who passed, with the highest ratings, the examination for junior engineer in 1938. The surveyy was calculated to demonstrate whether college students applying for Federal positions are among those who make the best records in college, or otherwise. The survy showed that 60.44 per cent of the eligibles were in the top quarter of their graduating classes and more than 83 per cent were in the first half. Similarly, the CSC states, in study of eight engineering schools representing all sections of the country, 83.11 per cent of the Fderal eligibles were found to be in the first half of their graduating classes. Comments the CSC: "It has been alleged at times that the best qualified university students tend to gravitate to non-Federal employment. The figures just compiled do not support such a conclusion . . . The results of the survey indicate that the Federal service is recruiting for its scientific positions some of the best qualified graduates of American colleges and universities."

Bob Burns Says—

I was lookin' through one of them magazines the other day, the kind that are full of pictures, and it was almost as good as a trip around the world. The way things are happening so fast over in Europe it looks like they'll have to start puttin' out them magazines twice a week. But over here in the United States things seem to go on just about the same way they always have, and everybody is gettin' ready for the big election next year.

This magazine I was lookin' at had pictures in it of all the fellows that're being talked about for our next President. A lot of them was Democrats and a lot of them was Republicans, and there was so many good men there it was awful hard to figure out which one you might want to vote for.

Grandpaw Snazzy use'ta vote a straight party ticket all his life but then there came a time when his party got licked at the poles five years in a row. So the next year Grandpaw turned around and voted for the other side.

I says, "Grandpaw, have you changed your politics?"

And he says, "No. sir, Robin, I'll never do that. I still think that other party is wrong but I decided you can't beat 'em. And when you can't beat 'em, you might as well join 'em."

Her Majesty the Queen:

Duchess Enjoyed the Excitement And Adventure of African Travels

Strenuous Social Activities Followed Return; Elizabeth's Birth Tethered Her to Home

By Lady Cynthia Asquith.

CHAPTER XIV.

To Queen Elizabeth, who had never been farther abroad than France and Italy, these months of open-air life and really adventurous travel were a wonderful experience.

(The entire winter was spent in East Africa, when the Duke and Duchess put in many days in the wilds among the natives, hunting, fishing, taking pictures. They were royally entertained with native tribal dances and ceremonies. Theirs was a life filled with excitement and adventure, during which they encountered and overcame many of the difficulties that beset every traveler to these mysterious lands.)

One of her fellow travelers wrote: "During our African tour the Duchess showed her great versatility by thoroughly enjoying the various safaris and shoots, proving herself an exceptionally good shot, and in her enthusiasm often walking 15 miles through rough bush country where the going was of the hardest. Day after day T. R. H. would set off from camp long before dawn, each carrying rifle, field glasses and ammunition, returning at sunset after an exciting stalk to a meal consisting of their day's bag. On several occasions the Duchess, after spending some weeks in camp, wearing the usual safari clothes, and living entirely out of doors, had to return to complete and formal civilization —a great change, but one which did not in the least worry her, as she would appear in a quarter of an hour looking as though she had never been motoring miles over roads which in England would be considered impassable, or creeping through thorn brush and wading waist high in a swamp."

Attends Many Functions

After her wonderful holiday in East Africa, Queen Elizabeth returned to a very strenuous life in England. More in demand than ever, she consented to grace a great many ceremonies with her radiant presence.

Eight a day was about the average of the functions that, while Duchess of York, Queen Elizabeth used to be asked to attend. Naturally, only a small proportion of these requests could be granted, but nearly all of them had to be carefully considered. Assisted by her lady-in-waiting, Queen Elizabeth always dealt with her correspondence early in the morning, and every single letter she received was scrupulously answered.

During this crowded summer of 1925, she accompanied her husband on several important visits to the large industrial towns in the north of England. Here there were always vast crowds eager to catch a glimpse of the smiling Princess, who looked so happy that the contagion spread and every one else began to beam.

In August, as in every other August of her life, Queen Elizabeth went up to her beloved Scotland, she and her husband, first spending a month at Glamis and then traveling north to Balmoral.

This winter was saddened by the sudden death of Queen Alexandra 62 years after she had, as a beautiful bride, first come to adorn the country whose people at once took her to its heart where her memory still lives on.

After their return to London, King George and Queen Elizabeth lived for some time in Curzon House, Curzon street, and then decided to go for the birth of her child to Queen Elizabeth's parents' house in Bruton street.

Here, on April 21, 1926, was born a baby girl, now Heir Presumptive to the Throne.

Little Princess Elizabeth was welcomed with general rejoicings. The bells of St. Paul's clanged out jubilation and the Tower of London fired off the royal salute of 21 guns.

Must Leave Baby

It had long since been settled that the then Duke of York was to go on an imperial mission to open the first Parliament to be held in Canberra—the new capital of Australia. Naturally it was expected that his wife would accompany him. This meant leaving Princess Elizabeth, now 8 months old, and missing no less than half a year of her enchanting babyhood.

Had the opportunity come earlier, Queen Elizabeth would have eagerly welcomed the exciting prospect of going round the world, but now that strong strands, newly twisted, of motherly love and anxiety, tethered her to home, departure was anguish.

But it was a case of clear duty, and there could be no real hesitation. Leaving the baby in the tender care of four devoted grandparents and the Nannie of her own childhood, Queen Elizabeth, clasping round her little daughter's neck the string of coral worn all through her own babyhood, sadly kissed her good-by and set forth to put a girdle round the earth.

London, April 24.—The reign of terror which the Nazi Party has established in Germany and which has been extended to every country that falls under German domination has created a new problem for the rest of the world. There are some hundreds of thousands of homeless people whose crime is either that they have held political opinions of which Hitler does not approve or that they have running in their veins the blood of the race which gave us the Bible and which is the object of Hitler's undying hatred.

The ordinary British man, kind-hearted but unimaginative, is inclined to shrug his shoulders and exclaim: "It is all very terrible, but it is not our business. We have our own unemployed to think of first; charity begins at home. Am I my brother's keeper?"

Twinge of Conscience

When recently one small party of refugees who had succeeded in reaching Great Britain were carried shrieking back to the airplane for deportation the easy consciences of British people received a sharp twinge which was, however, satisfactorily relieved on the following day when it was reported that this particular party had after all been allowed to remain.

This article is mainly concerned with conditions in Great Britain. But I believe the situation in other countries is very similar. Some days ago there was a case at Hove, in Great Britain. A former sergeant in the Vienna police, aged 41, who, when the Nazis occupied Austria, had been sent to a concentration camp for the crime of having served the old regime and who, on being released, had walked from Vienna to Antwerp and subsequently reached Great Britain, was sentenced by the mayor to 14 days' imprisonment and recommended for deportation. It was not even suggested that he had committed any other offense than that of being born a foreigner.

Baldwin's Appeal Recalled

This is a curious comment on the eloquent appeal which Lord Baldwin addressed to the British nation a few months ago when he said: "I plead to you for the victims who turn to Great Britain for help. They may not be our fellow subjects, but they are our fellow men. The honor of our country is challenged, our Christian charity is challenged, and it is up to us to meet that challenge." The reply to that plea is 14 days' imprisonment, to be followed by deportation.

Ignorance is more often the cause of wrongdoing than well-mindedness, and the present policy with regard to the treatment of refugees is based, in most countries, on ignorance. People believe, and it is not unnatural to believe, that the amount of employment in one country is fixed and limited and that every job that is given to a foreigner means the loss of a job to one of our own native subjects. This belief is wholly false.

Always a Haven

The British home secretary stated in the House of Commons last December that 11,000 refugees had been settled in Great Britain and as a result about 15,000 workers had been employed who would not otherwise have been employed. Throughout history until the present time Great Britain has always welcomed to her shores those who were fleeing from persecution and she has always been well rewarded for the welcome that she gave.

There would possibly be some excuse for such a policy if Great Britain were already faced with the problem of over-population. In the face of such scientific facts as this the policy of turning away useful, able-bodied, hard-working, honest immigrants is a policy of criminal lunacy. While Great Britain is chasing these people from her shores we are at the same time going through the slightly humilitating process of holding meetings all over the country at which leaders of public opinion implore British fellow citizens to fill up the glaring gaps in the defenses. More than 200,000 men are needed in the territorial army.

There are thousands of refugees longing to come to Great Britain and to serve her as soldiers or in any other capacity. Throughout history in every country exiles have made the best soldiers.

Many Power Badly Needed

Great Britain, and also some other great countries are in urgent, almost desperate need of man power at the present time. Scientific inquiry proves that that need is going to increase rapidly and that the declining population may prove disastrous.

In this matter, as in so many others, sound policy coincides with sound ethics. If it were not so the ethical argument ought still to outweigh the political. Even if it meant imposing a burden on an overburdened people, even if it meant a few more living on the dole and slightly higher rates and taxes, even so, it would surely be the duty of a country that has so long had the enviable reputation of being a home for the wanderer and a haven for the persecuted to maintain that reputation in a period when there are more wanderers and more persecuted than ever before.
